

Yule TV movies, specials never lose their appeal

What would the Christmas season be without the endless stream of movies and specials on television?

Some of the movies never seem to lose their appeal even after decades of viewing.

Favorites include:
 "National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation" (1989) – Those zany Griswolds are up to their antics again! Led by and all-star cast including Chevy Chase and Beverly D'Angelo, the Griswold family Christmas should be merry, but naturally turns into a hilarious disaster. Look for appearances by Julia Louis-Dreyfus (formerly of "Seinfeld") and Doris Roberts (of "Everybody Loves Raymond").

"A Christmas Story" (1983) – You won't want to miss this classic of the 1940s Americana which was partly filmed in Toronto. Young Ralphie has his heart set on a Red Rider BB gun for Christmas, but it seems like Mom, teacher and Santa are certain he'll "shoot his eye out" with such a gift. Will Ralphie find his heart's desire under the tree? Watch to find out.

"It's a Wonderful Life"

(1946) – Many versions of this movie have been made throughout the years, but the original outshines them all. When distraught George Bailey (Jimmy Stewart) meets a compassionate angel, he learns what life would have been like if he'd never existed. Holiday magic wins out in the end.

"Miracle on 34th Street" (1947) – Another classic that can't be missed! When a man claiming to be Santa Claus is deemed insane, a young lawyer and a headstrong young girl come to his rescue.

"A Christmas Carol" (1951) – Yet another movie that has spawned a series of more recent remakes. This one stars Alastair Sim as Mr. Scrooge, a bitter, miserly man who doesn't give a bah humbug about the holiday season. But will a haunting by three ghosts change his mind and ill will?

"A Charlie Brown Christmas" (1965) – Charlie Brown

is depressed and can't find the Christmas spirit. When he is put in charge of the school's holiday pageant and comes in with a meager Christmas tree, the school kids ultimately learn about the true meaning of Christmas.
