Firefighter pucksters, Leaf Alumni clash in cancer games

By Charles Tysoe

Toronto Maple Leafs Alumni allegedly outscored Halton Hills Firefighters in their recent Charity game at Alcott Arena. One-time Leaf defense prospect Jeff Ware, still waiting for that call from Cliff Fletcher, lit up the board with an early hat-trick while referee Bryan Lewis, from his (suspicious) game-long vantage point at the blue-line in front of the visitors' bench, failed to see at least 23 Firefighter goals.

True to career form, Lewis also missed every offside while following the advice of the famous deceased army warrior: "If you get lost, always look good."

Meanwhile, the likes of Steve Thomas, Bill Derlago, Gary Leeman, Rick Nattress and Lou Franceschetti pushed the Leafs' score into double figures despite first-line curmudgeon Wilf Paiement, who proved a thorn in his own side's effort with his unsportsmanlike tactics.

Paiement hit all four targets in the shooting accuracy contest after fooling Lewis into awarding him extra pucks; then, after scuffling with teammate Franceschetti Paiement dumped a full pail of water into the Firefighters' bench. His antics forced even the saintly Lewis to award a penalty shot to Firefighters' mystery "ringer" Josey the Outlaw, who easily dangled Carleton the Bear to fire up the crowd and the dormant home side. Paiement attempted to "out" the mysterious Outlaw with a feigned group photo at centre ice, but a timely cream pie kept the Outlaw's secret safe for another year.

Jack Valiquette, one-time OHL scoring champion, proved not quite as skillful in his role as Lewis' co-referee and quasi-PA announcer. Gary Leeman handed the inept ringmaster his hockey stick, with instructions to make a useful contribution to the affair; Valiquette both greatly pleased the crowd and showed off his officiating credentials by skating in a large circle with Leeman's stick perched vertically on his nose.

True to the form of their current NHL namesakes, the Leafs declined to play the third period. The Firefighters as expected were not intimidated by Paiement's watery crime; they fought back with a clever "sleeper" play, a player pretending to fall over the back of the net and tossing the puck over the net resulting in a goalmouth melee.

The outcome is still under review at NHL Central Command. Was it a "hockey play" or just great entertainment in a worthy cause?

The three stars? Number three: Steve Thomas, still with a magical shot and still too good for the American League. Number two: The most beautiful sound in nature not made by loons at sundown – the hypnotic rhythm of tape to tape passes of endless variety and skill. And the First Star: a tidy sum raised for C.A.S.H. – Cancer Assistance Services of Halton, thanks to the organizational efforts of Kevin Usher and many volunteers.

Acton Firefighters suiting up for this tilt were goalies Bryce Marshall and Alf Scott; Jamie Galway, Dave Pratt, Trevor McNally, Tim Robertson and Bob Andrews (and son Michael, a Georgetown Firefighter).
