Acton ready for Olympic Torch Relay

By Frances Niblock

Saturday – Day 51 of the Olympic Torch Relay – will see the flame cross into Acton at 7:57 a.m. in the area of Highway 7 and the Fourth Line, handed off to Aaron Wolkoff from Thornhill, the first of seven people who will carry the flame through the Town before it continues to Milton.

Approximately 12,000 people in 1,000 communities will have the opportunity to carry the torch – the symbol of the Olympic Games – that left Olympia Greece on October 22 and will arrive in Vancouver for the opening ceremonies of the Olympics.

Of the four names that have been released of people selected to carry the torch in Acton – just one woman – Barbara Thompson, an RBC employee – lives locally. Paul Nieuwland currently lives in Mississauga, but was an Acton resident when he entered the Coke contest. No information is available about Shaun Stillman. Three Acton people selected to carry the torch are doing so in other communities – each person was asked to selected three locations and were slotted in by relay officials.

Town officials said they probably would not know the names of the other three people slated to carry the torch through Town until 5:30 a.m. on Saturday.
