Dangers of driving with hand held electronic device's still lost on some

With the grace period for operating a motor vehicle with a wire-less communication device or any hand-held electronic entertainment device ending on January 31, Halton police made a concentrated effort to see if drivers were adhering to the new law. They found that some drivers still haven't got the message.

The driver was finally forced to stop at a red light, still not reacting to the officers behind him. The officers seized a moment to drive up beside the driver, with their lights still on and sitting right beside the vehicle, the driver still failed to acknowledge the police. A loud blast of the siren would finally get the attention of the driver, he rolled down his window, still on the phone, and officers asked him if he would hang up so they could pull him over. A ticket was issued.

emergency calls to the police, fire department and emergency medical services. If possible, drivers should pull off the road before making the emergency call.

You can not use your hand-held cell phone or device while stopped in traffic or at a red light. Your vehicle must be off the roadway or lawfully parked on a roadway, it can't be in motion and must not impede traffic.

On February 3, officers observed a pick-up truck southbound on Trafalgar Road, in Oakville. It was clear the driver of the vehicle was talking on his cell phone. Officers pulled in behind the male and activated their emergency lights. The driver was oblivious to the officers behind him and he continued to proceed.

To date the Halton Regional Police Service has issued 70 Provincial Offence Notices under the Distracted Driver Legislation.

Distracted drivers are a safety risk to themselves and others. The Halton Regional Police Service wants to remind you:

In an emergency drivers may place

Before you set your vehicle in motion – hang up & buckle up.
