211 Calls

211, the phone number to dial to find help in the social and human service sectors, connected 10,932 Halton Region residents with information and referred them to thousands of organizations and programs.

The top ten reasons for calling 211 in Ontario were questions related to health issues, income and financial assistance; community services; housing help; food and meals; legal and public safety; municipal government services; mental health and addiction services; consumer and commercial questions; and federal government services..

"Halton is committed to creating safe and healthy communities where people have access to the services they need," said Regional Chair Gary Carr. "211 searches through all the services and programs for people in Halton and connects them with the best available resource in their community. This is a great service that the community is really finding helpful to get the information they need."

211 is an easy-to-remember, three-digit, non-emergency telephone number that offers a single window of access for anyone seeking information and referral to the full range of community, health and social services available in Halton. 211 provides free, confidential assistance in over 170 languages, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year and is also available on-line at www.211halton.ca

For more information about 211, contact Halton Region by dialling 211 or 905-825-6000, toll free: 1-866-442-5866, or visit www.halton.ca.
