Advice you can bank on™

Avoid fraud

With Spring upon us the OPP is warning all area residents, especially seniors and senior caregivers to be on the look out for fraudsters. This is the time of year that they come out of the woodwork in droves. Already this year, the OPP has seen several scams against the elderly by fraudsters posing as water purification experts, ripping-off the victims for hundreds of dollars.

Fly-by-night home repair or maintenance fraudsters target victims, selling products or services that are of little or no value to the client. They are often very pushy and rude and prey on those who are weak or living alone.

To prevent fraud, the OPP advises:

- Always get at least three quotes on any project around the house, regardless of the service or product being purchased / sold.

- Never sign a contract without checking the credibility of the company or person selling the product or service.

- Elderly persons, or those with little business experience, should never sign a contract without running it by a trusted family member, friend or neighbour.

- Never fully open or unlock your door to anyone you don't know. Talk through a locked or secured door if you don't know their identity. If you don't want them at your door tell them to "go away". If they don't, call police.

- Report suspicious persons or activity to police immediately.

There is no magic to preventing fraud. If something sounds too good to be true, or seems a little "weird" it probably is. Trust your instincts, not the stranger at your door.
