

ACTON GOES TRICK OR TREATING

PRETTY PACKAGE: Wrapped up like a birthday present, Acton's Alyssa got into the Hallowe'en spirit as she took part in the Acton BIA's downtown trick or treating on Saturday. — Ted Tyler photo

The "Hunger for Hallowe'en" and "Cans, Not Candy" movement sure generated a lot of food in Acton over Hallowe'en – food that will go a long way to feed the hungry.

At least 1,500 pounds of donated food was accepted by Acton FoodShare volunteers on Tuesday morning – most of it gathered by students at McKenzie-Smith Bennett School who collected food in the school and community.

Before Monty Greig scared people on Sunday at his haunted house on Frederick Street, he allowed tours, with the donation of an item of non-perishable food, which he delivered to FoodShare on Tuesday morning.

Throng of kids enjoyed a safe and warm trick or treating on Saturday when they visited downtown Acton for the annual BIA (Business Improvement Area) Hallowe'en event when merchants handed out candy to the kids.
