Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By Edsor. R. Waite, Shawnee, Oklahoms

Edgar G. Harris, publisher of the West Point (Miss.) Daily Times Leader, doesn't agree with Roy R. North, deputy third assistant postmaster general, regarding the relative cost of direct mail and newspaper advertising.

In a recent statement concerning a campaign to be inaugurated by post office employees in the interest of direct mail advertising, Mr. North says: "What we are trying to do is to offer the merchant a dignified service. The small fellow, particularly, who cannot now afford to advertise in daily newspapers, can make use of this new service. For the expenditure of say $50 he can reach 2,000 people. If they buy, he can expand and perhaps eventually become an important newspaper advertiser."

Commenting on Mr. North's statement, Publisher Harris

"This may be true in the case of the small suburban merchant in the larger cities, but it does not apply to the smaller towns and cities, where newspaper advertising is the most economical means of reaching the people.

"For $50 the local merchant or dealer can buy more than a hundred inches of advertising in the average local daily, and he can reach all the way from 5,000 to 15,000 buyers with a single advertisement. By reducing his advertising to postal card size (as Mr. North probably has in mind) he can spread his message through a number of editions and thus make a very effective campaign.

"The truth of the matter is that the local newspaper is by long odds the most economical and effective medium the local advertiser can use, and Mr. North should acquaint himself with the facts."
