ELECTRIC SHOCK HAZARD

In this age of electricity, the latest hazard added to life on the farm is clestrical shock. The passage of electrical current of considerable voltage through a man causes paralysis of the higher nerve centres, entailing the stoppage of breathing. The fallure of the normal tests for life should not be taken as cyldence of death. Persons have been Bread resuscitated after hours of effort although ordinary signs of life were absent. In cases where the contact was of short duration and where artificial respiration has been applied without delay there k; a better chance of recovery. though, in reality resuscitation from electrical shock is a case for the medical man, or at a pinch for those men of the power and telephone companies, welltrained in the art of artificial respiration, there are certain things that everybody can do. In shock accidents the victim is usually thrown clear of the live wire or apparatus, but if such is not the case the oblivous thing to do is to (Corn flakes, bran flakes, rice krisples) clear him at once from contact, the greatest care being taken that the helper (Berries or sliced, bananas, peaches or appraiser for the Farm Loan Board of himself is insulated from contact.
