TWENTY YEARS AGO

From the Issue of The Free Press of Thursday, January 13th, 1915

January thaws are coming frequently this year.

With many other municipalities, Acton's surplus in the operation of the Hydro system has resulted in a reduction of rates of from fifteen to twenty per cent.

Letters received by Reeve Hynds give particulars of the narrow escape of Handsman H. J. Hynds while acting as stretcher bearer in Belgium on December 24th.

Forty-one ladies assembled in the Council Chamber on Friday to make quilts for the Belgians.

The series of union services last week in the various churches were well attended and very interesting addresses were given by the ministers.

Messrs. George and Victor Campbell, of Daylands, Alberta, have been visiting friends in Acton and vicinity. They left 27 years ago with their parents, first settling in North Dakota, but finally settling in Alberta.

John Gordon, son of the late John Gordon, of Gordon Hall, passed away in Edmonton, on Sunday, December 26th. Mr. Gordon lived on the homestead until about sixteen years ago, when he removed to Rainy River, later taking up farming at Madsstone, Sask.

Mr. D. C. Russell, grocer, has purchased the business and good will of the Statham Bakery. This successful business was commenced here thirty years ago by Mr. Thomas Statham.

"I HAD A FRIEND"

A friend is one who brings out the best in you; comforts you in time of grief; encourages in defeat; rejoices in victory.

Perhaps the truest example of real friendship was that between David and Jonathan. Perfect trust. No self-seeking. No jealousy. No putting oneself above the other.

It takes a big person to be a true friend. Can you really rejoice when you see an honor come to your friend? Can you truly acknowledge that in some particular your friend is your superior?

Or when the friend announces that he has been honored, do you at once think of a greater honor that came to you, and tell it?

When there is a choice of places to do stand back to allow your friend first choice? Or do you frantically hasten forward to get the chief place?

There is a test for choosing friends. It is well to know it. If a person does not help us to be braver, cleaner; to have more confidence in ourselves; to dare more, to do better deeds; to think success thoughts, he is not the best friend for us.

"I had a friend." Can those who know you intimately, say that of you—Georgia Moore Libering.

TWO OF A KIND

Smith: "Do you know that my brother is to absent-minded that one day, thinking his bicycle was outside, he went to get on but fell off because it wasn't there."

Jones: "That's nothing! Why, my cousin one night in bed, actually struck a match to see if he had blown the candle out."

It will relieve a Cold.—Colds are the commonest ailments of mankind and if neglected may lead to serious conditions. Dr. Thompson's Electric Oil will relieve the bronchial passages of inflammation speedily and thoroughly and will strengthen them against subsequent attack.

Chronicles of Ginger Farm

Written Specially for Acton Free Press GWENDOLINE F. CLARKE

Well, this has certainly been one grand holiday for the children. Nearly every day they have been out with friends, skating, or tobogganing. There have, of course, been minor accidents, such as wet clothes, or an occasional wet foot—or feet—from being too venturesome on the creek.

One day when they went skating, patch, our little terrier, followed them. For about an hour he was quite happy, then he got cold and sat on the ice and shivered, so Daughter had to pick him up and tuck him in her arms.

Partner's outdoor activities have not been quite so enjoyable. His job has been to draw water from the creek for the cattle and as I see him go by with the bucket on a slight, it looks like a mighty cold proposition.

Enter the Villain

By CHET GRANT

GEORGIE BLAKE was seeing Mabel Porter home from a Young People's Dramatic club rehearsal of "The Old Red Mill." His wreck of a car—the Iron Horse—shuddered as it racing motor sputtered quiet winter evening with anguished roars. They were parked before Mabel's house.

"Well, personally," Georgie was saying, "I can't see this Mortimer Jenks with a telescope."

"You couldn't," Mabel answered with a tinge of scorn. "Mortimer is a finished actor."

"Finished is right," Georgie growled. "He's terrible." The Iron Horse rumbled at the night as Georgie nursed the children to get wet going to school, because that means sitting in a damp clothes, but if they get wet coming home, I never worry, because they can change their clothes right down to the skin, if necessary.

A night appeared in an upper window of Mabel's house, a signal which she quickly observed.

"Well, good-night, Georgie," she said with sweet womanly patience. "You mustn't be silly about all this."

"Silly!" Georgie yelped. "And you makin' love with a big sissy as if—"

Mabel stamped her foot. "Georgie Blake," she shouted, "I'll make love when and where and with whom I like!"

"Mabel!" A heavy masculine voice cloved the night air. The moonlight gleamed on Mr. Porter's bald head in the upper window. "Mabel, send that idiot home and come in the house. It's after one o'clock."

"Yes, father," Mabel called. There was a snort and the window slammed. "Father!" Georgie crowed. "Oh, dear! Dear Mortimer Jenks! Hey, Mabel, are you crazy?"

"Well, at least, he's refined," Mabel sneered above the din.

"Sure he is," Georgie rejoined, "and when I see him he'll be grandfatted!" Mabel sneered, drawing her overcoat about her in such a manner that it could be nothing but an ermine wrap. The Iron Horse rumbled away down the street flapping its fenders. The neighbors turned thankfully in their beds and went to sleep.

The last week of rehearsals Georgie missed in all. It was apparent to him that Mabel was going far out of her way to make "The Old Red Mill" a success. It was hard enough watching his girl, or the girl he hoped was his, making love with a sissy on a stage, but when she let the sissy see her home... Savagely Georgie planned revenge.

On the fateful night the town hall auditorium was packed to the doors. Mabel was lovely in a new gown and Mortimer Jenks hovered about her until Georgie's red hair stood on end.

The performance went successfully toward a sizzling third act. Mabel and Mortimer billed and cooed until Georgie was nearly hoarse with his senses. Under the lash of his indignation he made his part so real the audience positively hated him and when Mortimer made his dramatic entrance to rescue Mabel from Georgie's clutches there was a shout of acclaim.

Silence settled on the house. Tense, the audience waited for the hero to settle the villain's hash. But although Georgie cringed before the triumphant and handsome Mortimer, he was gritting to himself, "I'll do it, by heck! I'll do it!"

Mortimer kissed Mabel and then advanced to Georgie. "Do you admit defeat?" he thundered with downy insolence.

Every head turned toward Georgie. It was his eyes to mutter, "Course, never!" make an attempt to escape and be overpowered by Mortimer. Instead, his voice snarled to the farthest seat an exultant line that wasn't in the script.

"Come and get it, Lollypop!" He shot a straight hard left to Mortimer's nose. He crossed with his right, but in his excitement and anxiety he missed by a foot. There was a howl from the audience. Mortimer Jenks was everywhere at once. Georgie did his best, but he was no match for all the fists he saw before him. A thousand stars rained across his vision and the curtain came down to thunderous applause.

Georgie changed over quickly and made an unobtrusive exit. He was lame and sore in a hundred places. His jaw hurt like fury. "Georgie, you were grand!" The moon was behind a cloud and Mabel stood there looking almost like Sarah Bernhardt offering gifts. "Thanks," Georgie mumbled through bruised lips. "Come on and I'll see you home."

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Capital punishment—a grim subject indeed and many wonder, if it is the proper way in which to deal with those who have killed a fellow man.

Every time some poor creature is to pay the supreme penalty of crime there is a great surge of pity for the condemned. That is natural and it would be unfortunate if it were not so.

There are in knowledge these two excellences: first, that it offers to every man the most selfish and the most excited; his peculiar inducement to good, it says to the former "Serve mankind, and you serve yourself"; to the latter, "In choosing your best means to secure your own happiness, you will have the sublime inducement of promoting the happiness of mankind."

The Development of Pasture Strains of Timothy

One of the major projects of the Division of Forage Plants at Ottawa is the breeding of improved strains of timothy. The main object in this work is the development of leafy perennial pasture strains. Recent experiments have shown that timothy ranks first in palatability among pasture grasses, and its nutritive value, winter-hardiness and good seedling habits amply justify an extension of its use in pasture mixtures.

Another consideration in the breeding of timothy is the development of rust resistant strains. Twenty selections of the hay type have been isolated during the progress of this study. These are almost completely rust resistant at Ottawa.
