CARCASS GRADING OF HOGS AMPROVES STANDARD

While it is true that there has been marked improvement in recent years in the quality of hogs sent to the markets throughout Canada, the fact remains the standard of quality could be substantialki improving from bealing ears, having ly improved as the following figures disclose: In 1934 out of a total of 3,025,161 hogs marketed only 576,051, or 19.1 per cent were selects; 42.5 per cent, were bacons and 38.4 per cent, were butchers or lower grades. A considerable number of the selects were -found unsatisfactory for export, owing to bruises, soft or oily carcasses and other defects. The marketing of low quality hogs and of those bruised, soft, oily or diseased means a substantial loss to farmers.

One of the most effective ways to bring about the desired improvements in the quality of hogs offered on the markets is by grading the hogs after they have Canada is not expected to be so probeen killed, known as rall or carcass grading.
