LADY ANGELA SCOTT The recent intimations that King Edward VIII has not abandoned all thought of marriage have revived again the old pastime of "picking a bride" for the world's most eligible bachelor, and after a spell of considering the qualifications and availability of the currently unmarried maids of royalty, the rumor-mongers now are turning their eyes to the nobility of England itself. Some half dozen or more maids of the "tight little isle" are now under scrutiny, say the reports, and among them is included the lady of the picture. She is Lady Angela Montague-Douglas Scott. 30 sister of the Duchess of Gloucester, who is noted as a sportswoman and out-of-doors girl.
