The next two men got singles, then Dick, third member of the Clement family, made no mistake this time, and touched all the bases, bringing in two runs with him. This finished Telfer, and Cripps was called to action. He got them retired with no more hitting.

Matt. Tyler started off the sixth inning for Acton with a lovely hit, that was good for four bases, but nobody else followed his example, and one run was all they could get.

Cripps had a little difficulty in finding the plate in the seventh, and baued three free passes, aided by two singles, to put another two runs across the pan for the vilitors. Acton had no luck in the seventh, and were retired in order. MILTON ABRHPOAE
