Mrs. Smith Continues Her Education

You know Mrs. Smith—the little bride. A few weeks before her marriage she graduated from college with high honors. But in one respect her education was faulty.

Yesterday, for instance, she picked up the telephone and called the grocer. She said: "I would like to have some things sent up. A bag of flour — three packages of breakfast food — one can of baking powder — six bottles of ginger ale — a pound of coffee — a package of — what's that? Oh, Oh. Why, I'm sure I don't know what brand. Just any kind, I guess!"

Small wonder the storekeeper interrupted her. He gets few orders like that. Wise housewives buy things by NAME. Not merely groceries, but kitchenware and piece-goods and household appliances; shoes and shirts and garden seeds; all the thousand and one things they need.

Mrs. Smith will finally complete her education. She will learn to study the advertisements in the weekly paper, and to keep herself informed as to qualities and prices. She will take her place alongside thousands of other women as the efficient purchasing agent of her home.
