According to Provincial Traffic Officer installed as Grand Muster for the coming H. W. Howell, who investigated the crash, cars driven by Ilsey and William Bonathan were 'proceeding in the same direction, about two miles west of Georgebown.

Isley stopped to pick up Chaplin, whom he knew. Chaplin had climbed into the car and was just closing the door when Bonathan's machine struck the back of the Isley car. The top was knocked off Ilsey's machine, and carried 75 feet down the road. Both automobiles went into the ditch, at the left side of the road, and next day a cushion from Isley's auto was found in a field on the right side of the road. Both cars were very badly amashed.

Isley had a load of potatoes and turnins in the back of his machine, and it was believed that this was partially responsible for the fact that his car was
