CANAL TRAFFIC GAINS

In this age of speed and stream-lining it is interesting to note that traffic on Canadian canals is increasing. Freight traffic on the Welland Ship Canal, which connects Lake Erie with Lake Ontario and overcomes the drop at Niagara Falls, mounted in 1936 to 10,438,000 tons compared with 8,953,000 in 1935 and 9,280,000 in 1934, the previous record. Navigation opened two weeks later than in 1935. Large gains over 1935 were shown in wheat, soft coal, iron ore, other ore, pulpwood, gasoline, barley and iron and steel. Freight using the St. Lawrence canals amounted to 8,288,000 tons in 1936, almost reaching the record made in 1929 of 8,412,000 tons, and 1,415,000 tons greater than in 1935.

The Canadian system of canals and inland waterways is among the most remarkable in the world. Nature was good to Canada in supplying navigable rivers and lakes—the channels of the original fur trade—and great expenditures have been shown in improving the water routes by artificial means. The St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes and inter-connecting channels form an unequalled system of inland water transportation extending two thousand miles into the interior of the continent. From Lake Superior to the Atlantic Ocean is a drop of about 600 feet, and to overcome this fall and other obstructions to navigation the Canadian Government has expended more than 240,000,000.

BIG U. S. MARKET FOR CANADIAN FISH

Among the fish-food specialty imports into the United States, Canadian fresh sea scallops find their big market in Boston, Nova Scotia being the source of supply. Canadian fresh sea scallops are also sold in the New York market, according to the Natural Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways. New York is the big market for Canadian smelts, these coming from Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and the Gaspé Peninsula, in Quebec. Other markets are Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia and to a lesser extent cities in the mid-Western States. Considerable business is done in eels from Quebec, which are shipped alive in tanks on canal-boats during the period of navigation or until the canals freeze over. Dead eels are handled on barrels, packed around a central block of ice. Eels are specially in demand at Christmas time for the Italian trade, being one of the favorite dishes among the Italians during the Christmas season.

RICKSHAW MEN LICENSED

Licensing of pullers of public rickshaws in the International Settlements of Shanghai, China, has just been completed with 37,000 men possessing the right to ply their peripatetic trade. More than 800 candidates had been rejected because of age or unfitness. The licensing began in the autumn of 1934. It has been expected that more than the maximum of 40,000 pullers would try to be licensed during the period set aside for the procedure. Originally the plan was for the rickshaw owners to nominate 30,000 pullers and the City Council 10,000, but subsequently the council granted the owners the right to nominate 40,000.
