Eden Mills

The weekly meeting of the Y. P. U. was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wright. Mrs. Bridle, Missionary Convener, had charge of a very interesting and helpful program. After the opening exercises, Mrs. Bridle read the Easter story, in three parts, "The Garden," "The Cross," and "The Crown." It pictured very vividly the scene in the garden and also at the cross, where Jesus gave Himself so willingly for our sins. Silent meditation followed. The hymn, "Crown Him with Many Crowns," was sung very feelingly. The guest speaker, Mrs. George Thomas, formerly of Weyburn, Sask., described very clearly her experiences in the Canadian Northwest, which proved very interesting. Mrs. Bridle expressed her thanks to Mrs. Thomas for her splendid talk. Mrs. Bridle then took charge of the business part of the meeting. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Wright for the use of their home, and to Mrs. Thomas for her talk.

The "True Comrades" Trail Ranger Group met in the home of the Mentor, Mr. W. Bridle. The scripture was read by Master Russell Lewis, and prayer was offered by Mr. Bridle. Master Billie Lawrie conducted a very interesting game.

Cook were each sentenced to two months' imprisonment in Milton jail on each of two charges of stealing old iron from Trafalgar Township farmers, when they were convicted by Magistrate McEwen in Magistrate's Court on Friday afternoon. —Record Star.

ASKING WHY

Small children are so often snubbed for asking why, that some of them get the idea that it is a serious fault to be curious about the reasons for conditions. Instead, it is one of the most necessary characteristics. You young folk who take everything for granted, who are not interested to understand the workings of the radio or the fundamental principles of aviation, show an unfortunate lack of intelligence. Curiosity when it has to do with your neighbor's business, is far from an admirable characteristic. When it asks why, it is the sign of intelligence.

IF YOU WANT TO BECOME A BORE

The current way to become a bore is to assume a blasé air as if nothing on earth interested you. Some young people think it is a sign of sophistication to yawn when any subject is mentioned. However that may be, it is an excellent way to make your acquaintances feel like yawning when they see you coming. The familiar saying that the man who is interested in everything attracts everybody is as true now as it ever was, perhaps a little truer, since enthusiasm is not so common as it used to be.

Uninterested people are unattractive beyond a certain point. One who is blasé, "fed up" with everything, is the sort of person most of you will go a mile out of your way to avoid.

MISSING BY A NARROW MARGIN

Often the winner of a race and the runner-up are very close. A fraction of time, so small that it sounds ridiculous when put into words, measures the difference between the achievement of the two. As far as results are concerned, the difference is considerable. The prizes go to the winner. Fame is for the one who comes out ahead. A few seconds may measure the difference in the time the two crossed the line. The other differences are tremendous, however.

Some one has said that many of us are nearer to the top than we have any idea. In other words, a little more effort, a little more persistence would make us winners; but we get tired of trying, or lose courage, and so never get into the first rank. If our failure showed that we never had a chance, it would not be so bad. To fall by a very narrow margin is a tragedy.

AN OLD ENGLISH CUSTOM

It is characteristic of Charles Laughton that, to prepare himself for his picture, "Mutiny on the Bounty," he read all the available books on the subject. In one book he found that Capt. William Bligh, whose part he was to take, had his naval uniforms made at the Bond Street firm of Gieves. So, when he was in London, Laughton dropped into Gieves and said: "I wish to inquire about some uniforms you made some time ago for Capt. William Bligh."

"Yes, sir," said the man, "and about what was the date, sir?"

"1789."

"Just a minute, sir," and in a very few minutes the employee was back with an old volume containing not only the record of Capt. William Bligh's uniforms, but a description of how many buttons there were on the coats, how they were spaced, and which buttons holes worked and which ones were there merely for display. Laughton ordered a complete set for use in the picture. —Landmark.

THIS WEEK'S PUZZLE POEM

Take my first from out of Second
And my second out of three,
Then my third comes out of reckoned,
And my fourth is found in splice.
When my fifth from agow you've found,
And my sixth from out of sleet,
Dig a little in the ground,
And my seventh you're bound to meet.
My eighth in plenty can be seen,
And my ninth in shine and sheen;
My tenth look into flare,
My eleven is also there.
My twelfth is in school, and in college,
While my next in the scholar is known;
My fourteenth is always in knowledge,
And my fifteenth in utter, not grown.
My sixteenth in mistress or master,
My next in a hot cross bun;
My eighteenth in hurry, not faster,
While my last comes "with haste, not run."
My whole will be found, if you take time to look,
To be somebody's hang in your history book.

Answer to be on a coupon and sealed in an envelope. The first correct solution opened on Friday morning, at nine o'clock receives as a prize something towards your house decorations for the Coronation.

SEEING THINGS

Pat was over to London, and while there visited the Zoo. When he got back home, he met his old friend, Mike. Telling of his experience, he said: "Mike, if you ever go to London, be sure and visit the Zoo. While I was there I went to see the lions. They were good. I went from there, until I came to a door with a sign on it that read 'Kangaroos,' and I went in to see them. Begorrah, they were funny looking animals! I went from there to another door with a sign on it that read 'Monkeys,' and Mike, whatever you do, don't miss the monkeys. Then I went on until I came to another door with a sign on it that read 'Exit.' Pat said that one up, Mike. Sure it's a fake!"

CONCENTRATE

Most of us face the vacation period with an idea of accomplishing a great many projects. Now that the vacation period is just beginning, we frequently find that we have not achieved any of the projects we had in mind. Probably we needed to concentrate on one achievement. If we made ourselves familiar with a single classic author, if we practiced one athletic game with a diligence that would make us opponents to be reckoned with, if we familiarized ourselves with the commonest birds in our vicinity, then we are likely to have accomplished a lot more than we would have accomplished by adopting a program that spreads all over the map.

B. C. GOLD COINS

ARE HIGHLY VALUED
Among the world's rare coins are ten and twenty-dollar gold pieces turned out by the British Columbia Assay Office in 1862. The rarity of these coins is explained by J. E. Pulton in an article on the Royal Canadian Mint, published in the current issue of The Canadian Banker.

Gold was discovered in British Columbia in 1857, when the Province was a Crown Colony. The Governor applied to the Home Office for authority to open an assay office. This was opened in 1860 in New Westminster. The following year permission was given to extend the operations of this office and to coin gold in ten and twenty-dollar pieces.

In 1862 some trial pieces were turned out, but after striking these few pieces, the workers decided to do some striking on their own account and demanded higher wages. The new mint was accordingly closed and the strikers were soon digging for gold instead of minting it.

Some specimens of these 1862 gold coins are still in existence. They have more than once been offered for sale at from $8,000 to $10,000 each.

MOSSING

To want to "boca" is just as natural for some of you as for you to eat when you are hungry. In the first place you are sure that your own way is the best way, not only for yourself, but for everyone else. In the second place you mean to have your own way, no matter how other people feel about it.

Now this characteristic does not make for popularity. Everyone objects to being bossed, except those spineless creatures who are constitutionally incapable of deciding for themselves and are thankful to have somebody take the job off their hands. Even if your own way is right, and it is quite possible that you may be mistaken about that, the way are pretty sure to prefer their own.

Do not try to boss your friends and acquaintances and the members of your family, especially the younger one who are usually the chief sufferers. If you devote your energies to keeping yourself up to your own standards, you will find your hands quite full. Oddly enough, the young folks who are most inclined to boss others, frequently have a rather hard time to keep themselves in order.

Minus Arms, This Lad Writes With His Teeth

Armless since he touched a 6,000-volt high tension wire seven years ago, 14-year-old Bert House, of Warton, Ontario, has triumphed over the handicap to such an extent that he can do as well as any normal boy of his age in sports and games. Bert is showing how he writes, holding the pen in his teeth. He can drive an automobile, play baseball, football, marbles and make change. He also uses the lawn-mower at home.
