ANALYZE YOUR SELF-CONFIDENCE

All successful people possess self-confidence. You cannot imagine any one who is self-distrustful getting to the top. Self-confidence is not peculiar to the successful, however. A good many others have it, and because of it, they throw away their chances, and make failure inevitable.

Do not cultivate self-distrust, of course, but analyze your self-confidence. Be sure you have good reason for believing in yourself. Are you willing to back up your faith in yourself by the hardest kind of work, or are you hugging to your heart some silly superstition about your luck?

You need self-confidence in order to succeed but self-confidence is something that can be built up. Every victory you win adds to it. Every time you conquer the impulse to be lazy or to shirk, your self-confidence is so much the stronger.

Burlington

The Firemen's Drill Team have commenced drilling in the rink every Thursday night, preparatory for the Firemen's Tournament at Georgetown in August.

Postmaster Y. D. Ghent and his staff moved to the new Post Office Tuesday night, and are comfortably located in their new quarters. Citizens received their first allotment of mail from the new office Wednesday morning.

Miss Mary Edwards, of the Post Office staff, had the misfortune to accidentally fall out of an automobile on Thursday afternoon last, and injure her leg. Miss Edwards thought the door was shut tight, but as Stewart Emerson, the driver of the car, was turning around on Elizabeth Street, the door flew open and Mary landed on the gravel roadway.

On Friday last, Isaac Balmer journeyed to Hamilton to clear six hives of bees through the customs office. He ported his car on John Street, and after he put two hives in the car he returned to the office to get the balance. When he came back the car, containing the bees, had disappeared. Mr. Balmer reported his loss to the police, and the car was later found abandoned on another street. Possibly the thieves were not overjoyed with their company, and beat a retreat when they discovered the bees in the car.—Gazette.

WHO DIGS THEM?

"Are there beautiful gardens in Heaven, daddy?" a little boy asked his father.

"Yes, sonny," he replied reassuringly, "very beautiful gardens indeed."

There was a pause, and then the lad asked anxiously: "Who does the digging, daddy?"

Some Cockerels 4 lbs. at 10 Weeks Old

Mrs. Ralph E. Melvin got 108 "Xtra-Prof" grade Bray chicks in February, and in early May she wrote us as follows:

"They are just 10 weeks old to-day, and I still have the 108 and they average 3½ lbs. per bird. Some of the cockerels run over the 4-pound mark. This is my first experience with the Xtra-Prof grade. The difference in the price is more than repaid in the quality of the chicks."

Our June-hatched chicks are coming from the same breeding stock that produced the vigorous, growthy chicks described above. And it is even more important to get this bred-in vigor and growthiness in June chicks, than it is when you buy your chicks earlier.
