Next Sunday's service at the Presbyterian church will be in memory of Mr. E. H. Denison, who died last Sunday. He was an elder of this church from its organization.

Congressman Foss, of Chicago, is an orator. He is a close friend of Congressman Smith and it is such men as they who are destined to assist in shaping national legislation and affairs of state. The speech of Mr. Foss last night was an admirable one.—Grand Rapids Herald.

Our whilom neighbor, Judge Fullerton, is to build an annex to the Chicago Art Institute in memory of his father. It is a noble and generous thing for the Judge to do, and it may suggest to some one here the idea of a public library building on Hazel Park.

Last week Monday evening the K. L. C. E. of Pastor Thoren's church held a business meeting and sociable evening in the Sunday school rooms of the church. The room was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting and appropriate exercises were rendered in honor of the two great men of this month, Washington and Lincoln.

Mrs. Mary H. Moore of Port Clinton, was called to a funeral in Chicago a few days ago, and when she arrived found she was on the order of arrangements, prepared by her departed friend before her death, for a brief address at the funeral. Supposing the funeral would be in her friend's quiet home she reluctantly acceded. You can imagine her natural embarrassment when the friend was transported to the church and the Presbyterian pastor and friends insisted on Mrs. Moore's part being performed, and it was to the eminent satisfaction of all. Her address and those of the two clergymen were the testimonials of personal friends to real Christian character and worth, our idea of a family funeral service.

Mr. Clampitt, we are sorry to learn, had another fall a few days ago, but he is rapidly recovering from the temporary inconvenience inflicted.

H. C. Basye's dog was very much disturbed last Saturday afternoon by what seemed to be someone pounding on the board fence west of the house. Mr. Basye at last started to investigate, expecting to find a lot of boys throwing stones at the fence, but he was disappointed, it was only Ingalls Bros. new gasoline engine. They have put in a 2½ horse power engine to run their lathe and other machinery with. They are now getting ready to make '97 "Highlands" and if you want the cream of good wheels, step in and order one.

MRS. STREET'S DEATH.

Mrs. Richard P. Street, after a long illness, passed away Monday last, Feb. 15th, at the home of her son Henry, where she and her husband have lived since she was too feeble to care for a home of her own. She was born in England some 76 years ago, came to Canada West while yet a young woman and married there. For some years she and her husband have lived here, where all her children, save one, reside. Beside her husband, "Father Street," as he is respectfully and affectionately styled by so many, she leaves three daughters, Mrs. Senator Cosgrand of Windsor, Canada, Mrs. George D. Boulton and Miss Street of this city, and two sons, Richard J. and Henry C. Street, both of this city. The former is the well known cashier of the First National bank, Chicago, with which bank also the other son is connected.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from Trinity church, the service being conducted by her pastor, Rector P. C. Wolcott, and the interment in Lake Forest.

A TREAT.

The concert of the Lake Forest University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs was attended by a very large audience last Monday night, and if applause is any criterion, their efforts were evidently appreciated. They were encored after each number and responded in every instance. Some of the selections given by the Glee club were very fine, especially the drinking song from the German, which was given as an encore by Mr. Henderson and chorus.—Mendota (Ill.) Reporter.

Will appear at Goldberg's Opera House, Saturday, Feb. 27.
