ABOUT TOWN.

Some folks say still, in this the closing decade of the 19th century, that advertising don't pay; but the Duffy Brothers know better. Their express business has steadily increased since they took an "ad" in the News, so they have felt obliged to put in a 'phone. Now when you want a trunk, piano or anything else moved just "Hello, 56," and the thing is done, and at reasonable rates, too. They have just put in a -new parcel delivery wagon.

In October, 1878, Redfield Proctor, now United States Senator, in presence of the joint assembly of the State Senate and the house of Representatives of the bar, and the leading officials and citizens of the commonwealth, sat down beside the writer and signed the oath of office as Governor of Vermont, and as he laid down the pen we picked it up, cleaned it on the legislative penwiper, carried it home and will let you see it any time you wish - for a consideration.

Miss Minnie Rannells, of Des Moines, Ia., is in the city taking orders for two valuable books, the "Path to Glory," a family book of great excellence, fresh, crisp and inscincure, and the star speaker, a book every pupil in our schools who has to "speak a piece" should own. At least, there should be a copy in every family. Beside these two standard books, she has a selection of juvenile books, so that every family in town will find in her literary repertoire some needful book. She-should endeavor to attend. is an experienced Hawkeye school ma'am, understands her business, and keeps in mind the moral as well as the financial side of her work. She is heartily endorsed by the clergy, educators, editors, and people generally. She is an accomplished, as well as wide-awake, energetic and successful young woman.

As one who has suffered from the depredations of his neighbors' dogs. the editor of the News is interested in finding a recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the status of dogs before the law. It is to the effect that they are not property, and so the owner of a valuable Newfoundland dog killed by a street car company failed to recover, though the fact of the killing was not denied. Dogs, this court decrees, are "not considered as being upon the same plane as horses, cattle, sheep or other domesticated animals. * Unlike other domestic animals, they are useful neither as beasts of burden, for draft nor for food." Hence when a dog makes himself a nuisance you can kill him; his owner must take care of him all the time, or he is the victim of a shot gun.

REMOVAL.

The steady increase in the businsss of the News for the last five months has been phenomenal, demanding enlarged and more convenient quarters, especially where we can have the various branches of the office better and more satisfactorilly arranged. This we can have by removing to 254 Central avenue, just "around the corner" from St. Johns, where we shall have a north front with two rooms and plenty of side lights, an indispensable thing in a printing office. While we have been very conveniently housed during the winter, we will find the new location much more so. We shall move into our new quarters tomorrow and be all in shape the first of the week. Though this change entails extra expense on us, first-class job work will be performed promptly at the same low rates, and though growing better every week, the NEWS will still be be sent for $1 per annum. Call and see us no charge for admission.
