back to Miss Floyd's for ice cream and cake. It was the most novel, and unique affair of the season.

Finally, the party went to the Highland Park Club house for a dance, where Mrs. William Morgan joined them. The Park young people having set the pace, it now remains for other suburban towns to follow their example.

SOMETHING NEW.

We understand a well known gentleman of this city is planning to open a general house renting, boarding, and male employment bureau early next season in connection with his present business. If his plan materializes, he will have an office in the best business part of the city, where he will keep a list of every house to be rented, the name etc of the owner or agent; who will entertain and board summer residents, the number of rooms, prices, etc, also a list of all the good men who want positions as coachmen, gardeners, or general workmen by the week or the day. The idea is to help the people of the city at a very moderate cost, putting now and then a shekel in his own pocket. But he says he is not avaricious and wants neither the earth, nor all the money in the Park.

THE EXMOOR DANCE.

There will be a dance at the Exmoor Club house, tomorrow, Saturday evening from 8 until 11.30 o'clock. The following young men are among the ushers; Hobart Moore, Everett Millard, De Koven Towner, Vernon Cassard, James Watson and Richard W. Hawkins.

The following ladies will serve as a reception committee: Mesdames. Alexander and Quincy, and Misses Yoe and Millard. The club's series of entertainments for the balance of the season will be brilliant throughout.

We are happy to say the boulevard to the club house is now illuminated by a dazzling row of electric lights all the way from St. Johns to the port cochere.

The lady who is accused of having knowledge of the theft of the golfer's coat last week wishes in defence to say that she was just visiting a friend here; that she wished to see what golf was like; that she did not go inside the grounds, but watched from outside the fence, and that neither of her children was large enough to be implicated in any way with the theft.
