EUROPEAN TRIP.

From Judas Maccabaens Handel

Just at the last hour we learned that Prof. Gray was to deliver a lecture last evening before the Highland Park Club on from "London to Constantinople." The audience, fair sized and as the Professor said "se lect." was a little slow in gathering, the summer evenings are so long

It was carefully written and de cidedly racy and enjoyable, less scriptive of places and scenery than of personal experiences and impressions. His two minute account of his railroad ride through and out of London, gave us a better idea of it than anything we have ever read or heard. So of the train's arrival at old Dover. The trip across the Channel to Calais was inmitable, and gave us temporary touches of "qualms

We have many times read descriptions of the Sultan going to his prayers, but no thing in life like vivideness and reality equalled Prof. Gray's. That in fact to us was the charm of the entire lecture, all seasoned with his ever present, well known humor.
