

GOLF NOTES.

Some three weeks ago our Exmoor club folks accepted an invitation from the Glen View club at Evanston to go down there and have a sort of a matched game and were defeated by the Glen View folks. Then the ladies of the Exmoor club thought it was time to step in and redeem if possible the reputation of our home club and so they accepted a challenge from the Glen View ladies and beat them. Then of course all hands went to the Glen View's dining room and did justice to its elaborate and delightful dinner and they all came home declaring they had been most royally entertained from first to last by their Evanston hosts.

Tomorrow, the 29th of October, there will be a matched game or two between the Glen View and the Exmoor clubs on the grounds of the latter. First, they will play off a return match, and then at one and a half o'clock p. m., sixteen of Glen View's best lady players will be matched with sixteen of our Exmoor best lady players. These games will be watched with a lively interest, as the season draws towards its close and all are anxious to hold the trophies of victory over the winter. We know our choice of winners in these games.

We are glad to report the season so successful and so full of promise for the future, that the Exmoor managers feel justified in more quite extensive improvements on the grounds before the opening of the next season. They propose to add five or nine new holes, not yet fully decided which number; and they are also planning for some artificial lakes at various points on the grounds, where they will do most good, and add most to the beauty and attractiveness of the grounds. It is these steady improvements that tell, not now and then, once in ten or a dozen years, spurts. People like to see constant change for the better, and herein the Exmoor managers show their good sense and level heads.

The work of remodeling the Bethany church into a cottage is progressing rapidly.
