VIEWS ABOUT THE MILITARY POST.

J. E. BROWN.

Since opening his new meat market on July 11 last, J. E. Brown, of Highwood, has met with unqualified success. Buying and selling for spot cash Mr. Brown is able to take advantage of every favorable condition of the meat and provision trade, and his customers are already learning that this is a first-class and economical place to trade. Mr. Brown is a skilled and experienced man at his trade. He is out for business as his competitors have already learned. His trade is growing daily. Try the new cash market. It is the best in town.

A. WAHLMAN.

When Mr. Wahlman first came to Highwood, 29 years ago, this now thriving town was almost a wilderness and he could count but three small and scattered buildings. He has lived to see the town of his adoption become one of the leading suburbs of the great city of Chicago and the seat of one of the largest and most important military establishments in the assorted stock of goods and is in the enjoyment of an extensive and hard-earned patronage. Mr. Wahlman is one of our most eminent citizens and a gentleman highly esteemed because of his long residence here and estimable qualities as a merchant and as a citizen.
