THE MASQUERADE.

The firemen of the city gave their annual ball last evening in the Opera House and though the thermometer hung well down toward zero, the costumes of the masqueraders seemed as light as for a June lawn party.
Of all the fantastic garbs for human beings that we ever saw, those of last night were entitled to the prize. Ludicrous is no word for them, and how they ever could design such things passes our wits entirely. They entirely concealed the identity of the wearers, so you might as well be blind, so far as recognizing the persons in the crowd, but was as orderly as could be desired, and the city marshal and police judge did not seem any more necessary there than at a prayer meeting.

The crowd was something immense completely filling the big opera house.
The firemen were in official costume as though they meant business as well as pleasure. The music was by Prior's orchestra which surpassed itself on this occasion.

Over 400 tickets were sold, many citizens of course purchased tickets to help them along and show their appreciation of the firemen's invaluable services to the city.

A most bountiful and elegant supper was served by Somerville, the caterer, in the Opera House dining hall at midnight and thence onward.

Chief Bock and his aids are to be highly congratulated on the unrivalled success socially and financially of last night's entertainment. The receipts were $100.00, of which the men will make such a use as to make people glad they helped them. 'Rah for the Highland Park Firemen. It was easily the greatest event of the season.

Special mention should be made of the valuable assistance rendered by the police force of the city, especially the marshal, as Mr. Leesch sold over 100 tickets for them.

The Lady Maccabes, Highland Park's new lodge for ladies, will hold a bazaar at McDonalds' hall, Thursday evening, Dec. 15th. A full line of Christmas gifts will be placed on sale. Supper will be served from 4 to 9 p. m.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY.

Through the thoughtful kindness of William C. Egan and some others, an exhibit was given last evening at the Club House by the International Color Photo company. Messrs.
Douglass and Flova conducted the exhibit, the former delivering the lecture and the latter relating the slides and each was the right man in the right place. Mr. Douglass first gave a few minutes explanation of the scientific principles on which the work is based and then the processes by which the results are secured. The process was the discovery of Mr. James McDonald, who died in 1897, after spending some $40,000 of his private fortune in his protracted experiments.

They then exhibited a large number of slides of flowers, landscape views, residences, show windows and portraits, all to show how accurately and delicately the different colors could be reproduced. The foliage of June was as perfect as nature herself, the multiplied colors in masses of bedded plants and cut flowers, the dazzling brilliancy of a typical show window were all shown to perfection. Every possible variety of coloring was shown, and the more difficult the subjects, the more perfect the results. With the technique of the exhibit we are not familiar, but its wonderful results shown on the screen were as delightful as they were amazing. The hall was filled with a delighted audience.

Don't fail to hear Prof. Rolf's last lecture in his course, next Monday evening at the Club House, on Longfellow, whose "Tell me not in mournful numbers" every school boy has recited on the platform amid the applause of admiring friends. Longfellow's was a rarely beautiful life and his genius, though his poetry has not the stirring qualities of Whittier or Lowell.

Last Tuesday evening a pleasure-able dance was held at Fort Sheridan Park, which was well attended. It was in charge of Charles Carey.
