SATURDAY MARCH 11.

The NEWS-LETTER has decided to add a golf department to its pages. The plan that this paper will adhere to will be to keep in touch with the different golf clubs in the territory covered by this publication, and all the contests in which members of the "On-wentsia," the "Exmoor," the "Skokie or any other golf club of the North Shore take part—will be reported by representatives of the NEWS-LETTER. Our aim will be to make the golf pages attractive by well-written composition, accompanied from time to time by half-tone illustrations which will have for their subject either views taken of the several golf club buildings or groups of the players of the different clubs. The game of golf benefits the North Shore towns, as it brings each year a considerable number of Chicago people to this district as members of the golf organizations. Many of these lovers of golf become so attracted by the natural beauties of our suburbs by the lake that they become either permanent or summer residents of the North Shore. Then, too, for business men living in our midst, golf fills a long-felt want, as a means of relaxation from business cares—a healthful outdoor sport to tempt them away from the habitual custom of giving themselves up too much to work. Golf should be encouraged. It is the one game that any one can play and enjoy. Americans need more of open air diversions; less of the rush of city life. Will golf become the permanent game that so many predict it will? It seems is destined to call a halt to the American mistake of devoting too much time to business.

Pencilled Paragraphs.

While making no pretensions to archaeological knowledge, the NEWS-LETTER offers the suggestion that perhaps "Keep off the grass" is the real inscription on that Evanston rune.

* * *

The old-time judge or prophet was said to be without honor in his own country; while in the latter-day community it sometimes happens that it is His Honor who is without profit.

* * *

"No, mother; no studying at night for me," said the Kenilworth child; "that would be too much like incinerating the taper at both extremities"

* * *

It is said that all-truth is related. Thus we reason that some people's statements are only third cousins by marriage to the facts in the case.

* * *

At considerable expense the NEWS-LETTER erected a 90-stamp poetry machine. Its product will appear from time to time.

And now it develops that the illicit liquor dealers at Evanston will forfeit their licenses. Thus it appears the blind pigs failed to save their bacon.

"DAVID HARUM," the popular book written by Wescott, is receiving well-merited praise by all who have read it. No one should miss reading this story. "David Harum" is too witty, original and whole-souled an individual for Americans not to know.

Mr. P. A. Montgomery was in Highland Park today inspecting and making ready his beautiful home for occupancy. Mr. Montgomery, accompanied by Mrs. Montgomery, will probably return the latter part of the week for the spring and summer.
