PRINCE.

My neighbors have a little dog, a true prince
of the blood,

Of the house of Ratzenkatzer, dating back beyond the flood—

A cheery-tempered little soul, as brisk and tight as wax.

With nose so keen, and coat so clean, and teeth as sharp as tacks!

He used to call and see me on the round he made each day;

And always met me with a wag, in such a
funny way,

Of that brief narrative of his, which plainly seemed to say

He was very glad to see me, and 'twas such a pleasant day!

When'er I met my princeling, he was joy
personified:

He was so chock-full of happiness it rippled
as he ran;

And when he stopped to greet you, his smile
it was so wide,

His teeth so white, his eyes so bright—this joyous little man!

Thus passed the blooming spring-time, the
budding of the year;

No cloud on his horizon, no danger he could
fear;

The family home, the children, he was with them every hour;

The minutes seemed like bursting buds and every day in flower.

But now his folks are all away and he is left alone;

A prisoner, like poor Dreyfus, away from
kith and kin;

And night and day I hear him—his piteous
little moan—

Demanding why—what has he done—that he is thus shut in?

A GLENCOE WEDDING.

One of the pretty weddings of the season took place at "Cloverly," the residence of Mr. William Herbert Johnson, Thursday evening the 24th inst.

Miss Ethel Van Hise, niece of Mr.
Johnson, and Mr. Hugh Stuart
Campbell were united in marriage
by Rev. St. Johns.

Miss Maud Van Hise was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Alberta Hall and Edith Dudgeon. Messrs. Ira Bowen and Frederick Aswald were ushers, and Mr. Herman Borchardt was best man. Master Robert Johnson preceded the bridal couple with the ring on a satin pillow. The bride was given away by Mr. Johnson.

The beautiful marriage service was listened to by about sixty guests.
The parlors were handsomely decorated in white and green; the dining-room with nasturtiums. The bride's gown was of white taffeta silk, with court train of silk Battenburg lace, designed by the bride. The widding march was played by Miss Nina Kellogg. All the bridal party were connected with the Chicago Art Institute.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left the same evening for a trip down the lakes. They will be "at home" after the first of September at 399
East Sixty-Second street, Chicago.
