As a back-handed slap at a well-known member of Congress who is too fond of looking upon the wine when it is anilined, Mr. Depew tells this anecdote:

"The member of Congress was being shaved by an aged colored barber in Washington. The shop was a favorite one with the prominent men of the capital, and the old darkey who presided over it often boasted that he had shaved every great statesman since the Madison administration, which may or may not have been true. The member of Congress referred to was being shaved by the veteran one day, when he said to the latter:

"Uncle you must have shaved many famous men?"

"Oh, yes, sah! I has indeed."

"And a great many of those famous personages must have sat in this very chair where I am sitting, eh?"

"Da's right, sah. Dey's set jes' whar yo' is a sittin' tis moment, sah."

Yes, sah. An' I'se been a noticin' a mighty cur'us similarity between yo' and Dan'el Webster, sah."

"You don't say!" exclaimed the highly delighted lawmaker. "Is the similarity in the shape of my head, uncle?"

"Oh, no, sah. 'Tain't dat."

"Is it my manner?"

"No, bos, 'tain't yore manner, nudder; hit's yore breff."
