

Winnetka.

WINNETKA COUNCIL.

Short meetings of the Council of Winnetka were held on the evenings of October 23rd, and November 6th, and 8th, at which the following business was transacted:

The President read communication from W. A. Gardner, general manager of the Milwaukee Division of C. & N. W. R. R., in regard to grade crossings at Winnetka suggesting an interview with the trustees. He gave a synopsis of said interview as follows:

Mr. Gardner on behalf of Railroad Company consented to place flagmen at the North avenue crossing to keep watch of Pine street, and if found advisable to place a flagman at that crossing, to place a man at Elm street to operate the gates at that street, said man to be on surface where he can act in an emergency, to place a man at the intersection of Oak and Hazel streets to operate gates at these streets, said man to be on surface to operate the gates at Cherry and Ash streets, as at present, but to have flagmen at each of these crossings at the time when children go to and from school. Mr. Gardner expressed a willingness to take up the question of subways and track elevation on the time of the Chicago ordinances and was assured by the members of the Council that they would be glad to take the matter up.

It was moved that the Council meet as a committee of the whole to consider railroad matters, on call of President.

It was moved that the Attorney be instructed to draw up resolution, whereby Kenilworth shall be notified to place a meter at the water connection between the Villages of Winnetka and Kenilworth, the meter and work to be approved by the proper official of the Village of Winnetka, failing so to do, the connection will be broken. The Clerk was instructed to send Attorney a copy and look up the agreement aforesaid if such exists.

An ordinance was read and ordered engrossed, amending ordinance establishing use of water meters in Winnetka. Said amendment reducing price of water.

Trustee DeWindt spoke of the unsightly condition of Chestnut street and moved that in order to improve its appearance the grader be run over it and the line straightened where it was irregular. It was also moved that grader be run along Willow street to the Skokie road, and also along Winnetka avenue in front of Mr. Allis' place.

The Women's Society met with Mrs. Hadyn on Thursday afternoon.

A little son was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Martin this week.

Mr. Almon Birch, a former resident of the village, visited Mrs. Slote and family this week.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald will probably spend this winter in Florida.

The marriage of Miss Mabel West and Mr. Carpenter, of Portsmouth, was celebrated last Thursday evening at the home of the bride in Lakeside.

The first town meeting of the season was held at the Congregational church on Friday evening of last week. The election of officers took place at this meeting and other necessary business was transacted. The retiring President gave a short address, Rev. Quincy L. Dowd gave the "History of the Town Meeting" and Mr. Merritt Starr an address on "The Future of the Town Meeting." There were also a number of informal talks from several gentlemen on town topics and a discussion as to the town meetings and their management during the coming winter, it being the general opinion that the place of meeting should be changed they will hereafter be held in the Village Hall. Music was furnished by Miss Moore, of Winnetka.

Mr. C. S. Thorne entertained the Gentlemen's Whist Club on last Saturday evening.

There will be a Billiard Tournament at the Winnetka Club, beginning on Saturday evening of this week.

Mrs. and Miss Herdman have returned to their home in Ohio after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Herdman in Winnetka.

A luncheon will be served at the Winnetka Club, on Friday, the 23rd of November, at 1:30 o'clock. Ladies wishing to attend this luncheon are requested to send their names to Mrs. F. E. Herdman by the 20th.

The "People's Club" will listen to an address on next Sunday evening by Prof. Hayes of the Northwestern University.

In the interest of the "Forward Movement" to extend the power of religion in the churches and with the general public a series of fellowship services will be held next week in succession in Winnetka and Wilmette.

It is desired that the people of the village combine to sustain the meetings held in each place on the evening of the three Congregational pastors.

The following is the program: Wednesday evening, Nov. 21, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Walker, subject, "The Better Part." Thursday evening, Nov. 22, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Darling, subject, "What I Believe."

Friday evening, Nov. 23, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Dowd, subject, "The Kingdom of God," and its Call to Men for the Twentieth Century.

It is desired that the people of the village combine to sustain the meetings held in each place on the evening of the three Congregational pastors. The following is the program: Wednesday evening, Nov. 21, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Walker, subject, "The Better Part." Thursday evening, Nov. 22, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Darling, subject, "What I Believe." Friday evening, Nov. 23, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Dowd, subject, "The Kingdom of God," and its Call to Men for the Twentieth Century.

It is desired that the people of the village combine to sustain the meetings held in each place on the evening of the three Congregational pastors.

The following is the program: Wednesday evening, Nov. 21, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Walker, subject, "The Better Part." Thursday evening, Nov. 22, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Darling, subject, "What I Believe." Friday evening, Nov. 23, 8 p. m., at the Congregational church, 8 p. m., sermon by pastor Dowd, subject, "The Kingdom of God," and its Call to Men for the Twentieth Century.

Mr. Chamberlain, of Ohio, was the guest of her sister Mrs. Southworth, the past week.

Miss Etta Aymer, of Chicago, was the guest of Miss Southworth, the past week.

Miss Hazel Newham entertained a number of her young friends Saturday evening of last week.

Myron Raymond, of Evanston, and Miss Alice Paepke were guests of Mr. Delange last Saturday.

Owing to the illness of Dr. H. W. Thomas, of Chicago, he was unable to give his lecture on Faust Monday evening last. Mrs. Thomas filled the vacancy and gave a very entertaining lecture on "Who will Pay the Freight?"

Thursday evening, Nov. 22, Dr. James M. Campbell will lecture in the Congregational church. Subject, "Robert Burns."

The Woman's Guild will meet in the church parlors Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. A good attendance is desired.

The Glencoe Christian Endeavor Society entertained the North Shore division Friday evening of this week.

The Lotos Pleasure Club of this city will give the First Grand Ball at Healey's Hall, Lake Forest, Thursday Dec. 6.

As the club has a host of friends it is expected there will attend for several balls and parties or the winter season. The next meeting of the club will be held Nov. 22.

Get your calendars printed at the News-Letter office.

Get your calendars printed at the News-Letter office.

Get your calendars printed at the News-Letter office.

Get your calendars printed at the News-Letter office.

Highwood.

Miss Ade Bubb, who has spent two or three months with friends in Paducah, Ky., is at her home again.

Mrs. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton and Mrs. John C. Dent, who went to Denver to attend the wedding of Campbell have returned.

Mr. Morton, who has been east on a business and pleasure trip, has returned.

Major George S. Grimes, of the famous Grimes battery, and family expect to leave for Havana, where he will have charge of the battery station. There are three batteries at that place.

The families at the fort who have sons or other friends in Cuba, Porto Rico or the Philippines, have begun shipping their boxes of holiday boxes of gifts, edibles and otherwise. Last year Agent Condon forwarded one package of sweet meats, etc., which reached the boys in Majila on Christmas morning and made lots of them happy.

The telephone folks have out a new directory. It is set in smaller type, so as to reduce the size of the book. The Park directory shows about 200 phones installed by our social and enterprising people.

Miss E. E. Minor, of Chicago, spent Saturday and Sunday with her sister, Mrs. C. D. Yiele.

Dr. Charles Whitney, who has been assistant surgeon at the Fort for the past year, is transferred to Fort Walla Walla, Wash.

Dr. S. S. Turner, who takes the place of Dr. Whitney, is one of the oldest contract surgeons in the army, and has seen service almost everywhere the American soldier has been.

Charles Campbell, of Chicago, spent Sunday in Highwood and its environments.

Miss Josephine Savage, assistant postmaster at Highwood, has gone to a Chicago hospital for an operation on one of her knees, and her many friends and patrons of the office are looking for her speedy recovery and return to her post of duty.

The Highwood Grays, the baseball boys, gave a masquerade at the pavilion Thursday night, which was largely attended and a good time enjoyed.

The Knights of Pythias are working on their grand masquerade on Thanksgiving evening. Suitable prizes are offered.

We regret to say that in our list of presents at Mr. and Mrs. Hogan's silver wedding was accidentally overlooked a fine hand glass from Mrs. E. A. Welch and a choice chafing dish from Supt. R. S. Ives and Treasurer Edmund Des Jardin, of the Electric Railroad Co. If there were any other omissions it was purely an oversight, for we tried to note every gift.

The village school was closed November 8th, till December 3rd, by order of Dr. Bergen and the board of health on account of diphtheria in three or four families, though no new cases have developed, and it is hoped the disease is stamped out.

President Hogan has felt obliged to raise the standard of his family living since he received such a lot of silverware last week. He must fare sumptuously every day now, for his former standard was not cheap or low. He lives as befits his official position, to say nothing of his personal tastes.

If you happen to want a light lunch when up about the Sheridan Park drop into Mrs. Kelley's restaurant just outside at the southwest corner of the Park. It is a neat and attractive place and she serves only the best. She is a refined and cultivated woman who serves her village on the school board very effectively.

A SAD CASE.

The death of private Harsha at the Fort Monday by suicide is a very sad case, and he is sincerely mourned by all his associates at the post. In three months more he would have been honorably discharged after thirty years of continuous service on a pension and could have passed his old age in peace and plenty. He was one of the original soldiers here at the Fort and he had been in every regiment by repeated re-enlistments.

His habits were of the best, and had saved his wages and had laid up some $7,000, which he willed to the Speidel child in Lake Forest. He went through the Cuban campaigns and then went to the Philippines and coming home recently insanity developed, as in so many cases, and under its influence he took his own life. His funeral was held Thursday morning from the barracks and the burial in the post cemetery. It is a sad commentary on the moral side of this Philippine war.

Miss Maude Williams has returned to her home at Columbus, Nebraska.

Deyo Morrill, of Beloit, who was called home by the death of his grandmother, Mrs. Shendee, has returned.

Clinton Shendee and Bertha Davis, of Fort Sill, were married in Waukegan last Wednesday. They will make their home in Hainesville.

Work has been begun on Armour's ice house at Round Lake. About fifty men from Chicago are now working, and a few carpenters from Grays Lake, while they are expecting at least fifty more from the city. When completed it will be a very large structure. A boarding house will be erected also.

We neglected to mention heretofore that our soldier boy Eugene Wilmington, has returned home from the Philippines after serving three years with United States regulars. He was in the war in Cuba, and went to the Philippines in January, 1900. In his three years of service he has been around the world, but is thankful to be at home once more.

Musical and Reception.

A musical and reception will be given this Saturday evening, Nov. 17, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Leslie, for the benefit of the Congregational Woman's Society.

A varied and attractive program has been prepared, including vocal numbers by Mrs. Eisenstein, and Mr. J. D. Cole, and mandolin selections by Mr. Owen, of Oak Park. Miss Holbrook, of Evanston, and Mr. Lowery, of Chicago, will also assist.

An attraction of the evening will be a colored "mammy," Elizabeth Washington, who will sing negro lullabies in true plantation style. Her little boy whistles with her.

Miss Capron and Miss Thompson will preside at the candy table. Mrs. C. C. Arnold and M. S. Thorne will be at the refreshment table.

The old school ticket of the electric railway has been withdrawn and been succeeded by one of 50 rides for $1.50 good 60 days for the persons only to whom issued. The 3-cent per ride rate is preserved for pupils under 15 years of age who are certified by their teachers and improper use of the tickets by others is avoided. Two or more in the same school can use the new ticket jointly.

Prohibition Gain.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.

Sufficiently accurate returns have been received to indicate that the Prohibition vote for Wooley and Metcalf will be about 260,000 or practically double the rate of four years ago. The interesting feature about this matter is that four years ago due to differences among themselves, causing a split and not a little apathy, not to say disaffection, the Prohibitionists lost about one half their vote. Then went up the cry from the liquor people and their political supporters "Now the Prohibitionists are dead." "That is the last we shall ever hear of them." "They will never put another national ticket in the field," and we grant there was much in history, especially the history of American politics to justify this conclusion. But the Prohibitionists have proved a very lively corpse in this closing year of the nineteenth century. The party has doubled its vote of four years ago, and now numbers about 260,000. The increase has been very uniform throughout the country showing that it is not due to any local causes, but to a general growth of Prohibition sentiment from the rocky coast of Maine to the golden gate of California, from the sweet scented magnolia groves of Florida to the shivering pines of Alaska. The party have not sought in the past and are not men seeking to get into office for the sake of the office, nor turning the country upside down to keep the "other fellow out," but they are stirring in God's name by as much as in them is to save weak humanity from the man of the legalized liquor traffic.