Of course they are a slow coach set down in Vermont. But how is this. The state legislature adjourned November 28—two weeks ago last Wednesday. Just twelve days after adjournment we received the legalized pamphlet edition of the laws passed at the late session. Guess Illinois will have to hustle to beat that.

THREE are two recent inventions. In France, where silk is made from wood pulp, a paper is now made in this country. The other is in Georgia, where choice paper is made from cotton seed. This suggests to the Chicago News that the time is near when a whistle will be made from a pig's tail, according to the old adage.

PROF. KLAATSCH, of the University of Heidelberg, the eminent scientist, read a paper recently at a public meeting of anthropologists in which he showed that man was not descended from apes. That is very comforting to us personally, but what still puzzles us is how are we to account for the origin of some specimens of the human race we wrote of.

West Side Improvement.
Last week we had a brief paragraph calling attention to the plan of the council to issue $10,000 in city bonds, part to be used in building two east side bridges and the balance, after paying off some floating debt, was to be used in improving certain west side streets. Then we asked the east side taxpayers how they liked the idea of improving their own east side streets, as Vine, Laurel, Prospect, Central, St. Johns, Sheridan Road, etc. by special assessment on their own property and then pay 75 per cent. for improving west side streets out of the city's general fund, of which the west side people pay 75 per cent. It started up our west side correspondent in behalf of himself and his west side neighbors and fellow taxpayers, and we frankly confess he has made out for them a strong case.

First of all, let us say, we have often felt during the last two years while attending the sessions of the city council year after year, that the west side was not fairly treated. When Mr. Norenberg was alderman he used to try to get more lights on the west side, but east siders in the council would always down him. There used to be some east side aldermen very hard hearted it seemed to us, who seemed to say they would take all they needed and then give the leavings to the west side, there were any. So of the street crossings of the east side, as "R. G. E." suggests. Take Prospect for instance. There are Lake, Forest, Dale and Lincoln avenue crossings, and so it is on every improved east side street. Only more so in some of the general fund, of which the west siders walked up like paid their cent. thereof and got nothing in return. It reminds us of the bear and Indian who went hunting together, agreeing to divide the spoils. They spent all day and night hunting and carried it home. The yankee proposed his division and so he said to the Indian, you have all the glory and I will take the bear, or I will take the bear and you may have all the glory." Mr. Indian scratched his head and thought it over carefully and replied: "Mr. Yankee, so you don't seem to say bear to me at all." All these ten years and more while the west siders have paid their share—25 per cent. of the taxes—for the general fund, the east siders have kept saying "bear" to themselves, giving the west siders two or three little snips of hair off the end of brush's tail, and we honestly think that R. G. E. is about right when he insists that he and his west side tax payers have of slice of meat from the common carcass.

The west siders are right in another point, where the city council is wrong, namely; they don't ask the city to pay all the cost of improving west side streets. They say the true way to improve streets on either side of the track, east or west, is for the abutting property owners to pay two-fifths, one-half or three-fifths; that is, whatever is right and fair, and the city the balance out of the general city treasury. This is eminently right and just, and it is a policy that should be adopted by the city for all streets, because all the people use all the streets more or less.

We think every candid, fair-minded east sider will be compelled to acknowledge that in his general argument R. G. E. has rather got the "cinch" on us on the rising sun side of the track.

SOME of our readers frequently ask whether the new park commission, if adopted, can issue bonds and increase our taxes. We have given this case of the law some attention and the language of the act seems to confine the issuing of bonds to paying for land purchased and condemned for parks or boulevards and for improving the same. The language of the act would not authorize the issuing of bonds to improve or maintain any street already existing, or to improve and maintain a street over subdivided lands, as the title to the subdivided land is vested in the park commission, by law, and would not need to be purchased or condemned. It would not be the act of wisdom for the commission to attempt to construct a drive on the lake shore with twelve or thirteen thousand dollars. It will be a very short drive. The cost of a drive and the seawall in Lincoln Park which has been built along the lake front has been hundreds of thousands of dollars. We need not be alarmed at the possibility of a commission at Highland Park issuing bonds for a lake shore drive, even if the law would permit the money to be so used.
