Thursday, the 31st, Miss Katherine P. Sieber, who has been our postmistress for the past four years, turned over the office to her successor, Mr. Daniel McArthur, whose daughter, Miss Libbie, will have charge. There is no fear that the public will not be acceptably served under the new regime, but we are sure we only express the universal feeling in this community in saying that we all part with Miss Kittie in this relation with unfeigned regret. Her administration, like her own charming self, has been faultless and never, we are sure, has the public been served more courteously, more faithfully, more acceptably.

The writer cannot deny that he has the acquaintance of a number of those without whom the world would be a howling wilderness. Being of an observing turn of mind (that is a necessary qualification in newspaper work) he has noted a few accomplishments in the weaker sex. A man never for a moment thinks of a toothbrush as anything but a toothbrush, but a woman knows its endless capabilities. If a window frame rattles at night she wedges it with a toothbrush. If she is suddenly required to stir a dose of medicine in a glass and a spoon is not at hand the handle of her toothbrush is brought into play. She has ever been known to use it to loosen the mould in a flower-pot.

Then there is the hairpin. The uses to which a woman can put a hairpin are without number. Does a cork find its way to the bottom of a vial a woman will spear it with a hairpin and extract it. Should she wish to bore a small hole in a piece of wood, she will heat the hairpin and burn a hole with neatness and dispatch. As a glove or boot buttoner the hairpin comes in handy. The hairbrush, unless it has a silver or celluloid back, a woman will drive tacks or hammer the family cherub, as occasion may demand. She can make an excellent hammer with the heel of her boot and convert a case knife into a screw driver. While with a mop—well, the least said about her accomplishments with that murderous weapon, the better.

Romantic Grammar.

Years ago an American minister to one of the European powers was blessed with a pretty daughter whose charms wrought much havoc in the rank and file of the young men who met her.

She was sweet and gracious to all, but her heart, as well as her wit, belonged to her native land. One day her father found her at her desk knitting her brows over a letter.

"What's the matter, my dear?" he asked, patting her shoulder affectionately.

"Oh, I have to write another declension, father," she responded, dolefully, "but nothing will induce me to conjugate till I get back to the United States!"

James Huxtable, who has been living in Waukegan, but formerly made his home in Highwood, has moved to Evanston.

Miss Nellie Rudolph spent Sunday with Miss Emmelyn Alford and Mrs. T. J. Forrest of Ravenswood.

At dinner the other day the writer enjoyed a discussion carried on by three ladies—one, the mother of four bright children, the other two not as yet possessed of those family ornaments. It was pleasing to hear the ideas advanced by the two ladies as to how they would "bring up" the children should providence see fit to provide them such household comforts. It is much easier to advance ideas for the government of children than to carry such ideas into execution. Not one parent in a thousand can train a child to conduct that will meet the requirements of other people who are engaged in the same business, and if the ladies who led that discussion are ever given the opportunity it is safe to say that not one thousandth part of the discipline advocated by them will be carried into effect, and that their children will be "brought up" properly just the same—that is, in their estimation.
