Office of City Clerk.

There is hardly a more important office in the city in some respects than that of city clerk. Both parties have put up candidates with good qualities. Dooley four years ago obtained the appointment of postmaster. Under the present incumbent of that office, he did not it for the purpose of playing with it, but deliberately closed up all other business, went personally to the office, made his wife his assistant, and between them they ran that office with entire satisfaction to the public. We have yet to hear a single word of complaint. But any intelligent person could learn the routine of duty in the postoffice in the matter of a few weeks. Not so with the city clerk's office. Any one who has ever served as a member of the city council knows full well the value of a city clerk who is long been in the office, and knows the whole history, one might say of the business of the city, knows all its routine, knows where to look for everything, knows all about the matter of bonds, election notices, and all other machinery connected with the city affairs. It cannot be learned in a term or two terms; it must be learned by having been for many years the director of the office work.

Some few years ago many of our good people (the writer among them) thought that Mr. Finney had had the office two three terms and that a change was desirable (just as many of our good people two years ago thought a change in the city attorney's office would be desirable), and so Mr. Finney was set aside and Mr. Woodworth was elected. But long before his term of office was out, or even had out, the people began to be impatient to change back and they have taken good care since that to keep the same old, tried, and intelligent official. Rotation is a very nice in some things, but observing people have long since learned in political affairs that there are some places where rotation is undesirable. The office of city clerk is eminent one of them. We have personal known one instance in which the office was filled for forty years by the same individual and year after year no one was put up against him, although in every other office there was the bitterest kind of party contest. Everybody recognized the importance of having in that office one who was thoroughly familiar with the public affairs, one who was courteous, patient, polite, plain-spoken but unoffending; and so far as we can learn the public are not in a mood to make a change at present in the office of city clerk.—VOTER

Mr. Van Riper.

We have not always agreed with him, but in this mayoral contest we give him our most cordial and hearty approval. He had a perfect right to be a candidate for mayor; he agreed with his old associates on the general make up of the ticket and arranged a pretty good one. With that he went into the caucus and Mr. Cobb betrayed him the first thing. Mr. Cobb's one duty was to refuse the nomination; he accepted it, breaking at the outset the agreement into which all had entered. Does not that savor of political perfidy? What is a man if you can't trust his word, where is his honor if you can't rely on him to do as he agrees.

Hence all admire Mr. Van Riper's pluck and courage and fight, if you please. He may not win, but he will show that he cannot be driven like a dumb beast or sold in the shambles like the speechless ox of the stall. No wonder a gentleman like Mr. Schumacher withdrew from the proposed arrangement the moment he saw what kind of fellows he was to be associated with and that Dr. Ingalls did the same. Our natural sympathies are for the under dog in a fight, but we are ready to take off our coat and pitch in for a good man who is treacherously sold out.

Ossili Club.

The Ossili Club held its eleventh regular meeting at the club house on Thursday afternoon March 28th. Miss Harrington opened the programme by a delightful rendering of a Polonaise by Merbel and a Nocturne by Jensen. The subject for the afternoon was "Village Improvement: Need of Womens' Interest in Civics" and the essay was Mrs. Nannie Doney Brown.

The discussion that followed this very suggestive paper was animated and practical resulting in the formation of a committee from the Ossili to co-operate with one from the Highland Park Woman's Club to look into the question of the proper removal and disposal of garbage, and report later.

Mrs. Fessenden recited an original poem "Layst," and tea was served by Madam's Erskine and Warren. Mrs. Truxol was hostess of the afternoon.

Perplexed.

A. W. Fletcher has our profound sympathy. Everybody knows he is an ardent politician, it was born in his blood and bred in his bones, indeed political activity, intense and constant, is the very breath of his being. But he is a federal office holder and as such he must eschew politics lest he make of himself an offensive partisan. Hence his Herculean efforts to let politics alone just now.

His conditions reminds us of a certain good Methodist brother in New England who had the habit of ejaculating a fervent "Amen" on all possible occasions, when it was timely and when it was not. Finely his pastor, Lew to the circuit, reproved him and told him point blank he must stop it, he could only say "Amen" on rare occasions and in subdued tones. It was a terrible struggle; he did the best he could, twisted around in his seat, hemmed and coughed and held in, just as our post master does. He stays in his office till he can't endure it any longer and then he goes back to his barn and saws wood for half an hour to let his zeal evaporate.

Every little while he starts up to say something and then recalling himself he says "but I must not say anything" and starts for the wood pile. But you wait till after election and then he will follow the example of that illustrious Methodist brother down East, who, when he could hold in no longer broke forth in stentorian tones, "Amen, Amen hit or miss."
