Would you believe it if we were to tell you that right here in this city live children who have never seen the lake? If you don't, just go down to the Chicago bureau of charities some of these days and ask Superintendent Bicknell about it, says the Chicago Chronicle. He will tell you that this is really true, and, moreover, that many of these children live within a mile or two of the lake shore. Why have they not seen the lake? Because they have no money to spend in car fare and they cannot walk, for they are too small or do not know the way. There are thousands more, says Superintendent Bicknell, who have never seen the country, and many who have never even glimpsed at the parks of the city. This state of affairs you little people who live in pretty places cannot realize, but if ever you were to be taken over in the very poor district you would understand why it is so. The bureau, however, has begun its regular summer work of sending out companies of these little children to the country or giving them some kind of an outing. The good that is done the children in two weeks' time of living in pure air and with plenty of food is so great that often when they return they do not look like the same children who were sent away such a short time before. Superintendent Bicknell tells of sending a party of seven children to the country not many days ago, of whom six had never seen Lake Michigan, and not any of them had ever seen the country. On the way down to the city the little girl who had seen the lake, a much-envied little individual, told her experiences on her journey to the lake, and then described the big body of water. The other six sat breathless while she told the tale, their little faces all interest and astonishment. Often the good country folk who take these waifs for a short visit become very fond of their little visitors and adopt them. In this way they fall into good homes and are well cared for. After a time they grow accustomed to the country, but at first they are usually very lonesome, "because it is so quiet and there's so much room," as one little girl expressed it.

A young woman at Conway Springs, Kan., advertised for a husband, and the advertisement was answered by a young farmer living near Pratt. Correspondence followed and in time the pair became engaged. Last week the young fellow went to see his lady love for the first time. When he arrived at her house and before he could salute her she scanned him over critically and said: "I can never marry you. You are three inches shorter than my ideal, and we never could live happily." And that ended the affair.

GREAT BEAUTIES.

Many Handsome Faces Are Found Among the Women of Cashmere, India.

Many of the women of India, and especially those of Cashmere, are beautiful. In a typical Hindu beauty the skin is just dark enough to give a rich, soft appearance to the complexion, says a London journal. The features are regular, the eyes mild and black and shaded by long, lashed eyelashes, the hands and feet are small and well formed, the demeanor is modest, the manner is gentle, the voice low and sweet. There are fine-looking women among the middle class Hindus, as well as among the upper tiers, and even among the lower class the faces are often very pleasing. Many a Hindu woman who has, perhaps, little pretensions to beauty of face, has, nevertheless, the step and carriage of a princess, and if one is not too fastidious about perfection of eyes and mouth and nose her figure as she walks down the street with her load on her head is truly a beautiful sight.

FILE OF ALLIGATOR'S TEETH.

A remarkable operation was performed by a dozen keepers on a 13-foot alligator which is kept in the Bronx zoo at New York. The alligator, which is a powerful animal, showed signs of fierceness for some time. He wound up one morning by killing an eight-foot companion in the same tank. Then it was decided that the big one's teeth should be cut. A rope with a sling was lowered over his head and drawn taut; the tail was similarly treated. Each one of the legs was next secured in a like manner. By patience and repeated trials a lasso was got into the ponderous jaw. The alligator gave a bite and the rope parted like thread. Then a wire rope was secured. This was finally got into place.

Sticks were pried between the jaws to keep them from clashing together. Thus held, the reptile lay helpless and the work of sawing off some of the longest and most dangerous teeth was soon accomplished.

President McKinley's destination to cross the Mexican border while at El Paso is said to have reminded Representative Hitt of an incident of one of Gen. Grant's tours. During his first term as president Gen. Grant paid a visit to Niagara Falls. He was eager to cross over to the Canadian side, and it was with some difficulty that his friends restrained him, urging that there was an unwritten law that the president of the United States should not leave the country during his term of office. "Well," said Gen. Grant, pulling at his cigar, "that seems a very silly law to me. I would like to cross over so that Colfax may realize his ambition to be president, if it is for only five minutes."

According to a Washington report the telephone slot machines are doing an enormous work in the matter of taking worn-out dimes out of circulation. There is nothing to prevent worn-out, mutilated and almost smooth dimes from being put into the slots, and as a result many persons keep the worn-out dimes for that particular purpose. Many druggists and others who keep public telephones make no objection to taking mutilated dimes any more for the reason that they keep a supply on hand to do a telephone business with. When they see that a telephone user is going to put a new dime in the slot they simply take it in and hand a worn-out dime in exchange.

A steamer steward defiled the Chicago river by throwing into it a dishpan full of potato parings and soap suds and was arrested. They are getting very particular about that formerly abominably filthy stream. People no longer have to hold their noses in crossing it, says a report from the breezy city.

A patriotic society in Rhode Island calls for a new tune for "America," holding that the music of the British national anthem is not suitable for the popular American hymn. The British borrowed the air, however, and have never claimed it as an original production. The music of the "Marseillaise" is traced back to a German church composition, and that of the "Star-Spangled Banner" was known as "Anacreon in Heaven" long before Key wrote his famous poem.

It has been discovered that a firm of brokers in St. Louis have been insolvent for two years, but have been doing business just the same with other people's money. The discovery is very commonplace, indeed. "Other people's money" is doing a large share of the business of the world.

During the hot season it takes strength of mind to lay in the winter's supply of coal.
