MISS MOORE'S ADDRESS.

We did not hear Miss Moore's address in the Baptist meeting house Sunday night, but those who did speak of it in the highest terms. As a public address it had no special merit, it was its rare childlike simplicity and pathos that gave it charm and power. Such heroism, such clear perception of personal duty, such simple whole-souled faith in God, and in his work together with her clear unwavering faith in the gospel of Christ, as the one and only one all-sufficient remedy for one and all the sociological ills of the race are seldom seen.

We used to hear of her and her work the two years we passed in New Orleans, 1884-85. A life wholly consecrated to Christian work among the colored people, going and living with them in the colonies in the larger cities and in their homes wherever found. A cultivated, educated and refined young woman, giving her life to such a work as that, and she has put forty years into it.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING.

The township convention was held last Friday in the Presbyterian chapel by two state workers. The workers were overworked; that is, there was not time for discussion, and hardly time for any questions.

Mr. Schenck is a fairly good worker, but two or three of his normal drills were enough, the others seemed long drawn out—a small piece of butter spread over two large a slice of bread. If about half of his matter could have been left out and the time thus saved given to discussion the convention would have been more satisfactory and profitable.

Mrs. Lamoreaux was very far and away ahead of any other female speaker in any of our conventions. Her addresses were, without reserve, the finest ever heard. The first one in the afternoon was absolutely perfect. We question whether Washington Irving ever wrote anything more finished and beautiful than her description of the home of Zecheriah and Elizabeth before and after the birth of John the Baptist. Her manner was so quiet, sweet and winsome that she held all spellbound from first to last. The many who missed it lost a very rare and valuable opportunity.

OUR PUBLIC LIBRARY.

An hour spent a few days ago looking over the reference books recently added to our public library disclosed the fact that the board has done admirably. The selections have been made with good judgment. They have, for instance, the Century Dictionary and Atlas, which is up to date, and is a very superior work. We have the London Times Atlas, which has been compared with this in the library. One thing about the Century Atlas, it is not overloaded with names of obscure places, so that the important names stand out. Then there is Haydn's Dictionary of Dates, an invaluable book of reference. They have the Putnam edition. Ours is the Harpers, both the same size. One of the first books we put in our little library, was the old Haydn's, in 1857.

They have put in also Alibone's Dictionary of Authors, now in five volumes, which we wish was at our elbow all the time, as also Appleton's Cyclopaedia of Biography. Then that invaluable book of reference, Poole's Index, the new compressed edition, of course, so that you can find in what magazine any special article has appeared and go for it at once. Also, Larned's Ready Reference History in six volumes; with Prof. Oscar Fay Adam's Dictionary of American Authors and Lippincott's Pronouncing Biographical Dictionary, so if you do not know how to pronounce the name of that old Russian writer, Tolstoi, go there and see for yourself. We once heard it as "Tolzack." The one lack in this Lippincott dictionary is that the exact date, day and month, of person's births and deaths are not given. For instance, Francis Parkman was born in Boston in 1823. Why not the month and day? How do you pronounce Virchow's name? See how it is in Lippincott book.

But one of the best set of books is Hasting's Bible Dictionary in four volumes, at $6 per volume, and they are worth it. It is an up-to-date work in every respect; all the "higher criticism" we want, and packed full of condensed and valuable learning, and we want to thank Rector Walcott for putting it there. There is one more book for men and boys of a practical scientific turn, a Cyclopaedia of Recipes, compiled from the Scientific American. The same folks, Munn & Co, published another volume we want to see in there, a resume of the discoveries, etc. of the nineteenth century, by first class men. We are pleased with and proud of these new additions to our library.
