Rev. A. Haefele leaves next Monday for Shannon, Ill., to attend the conference of the United Evangelical church, which opens on Thursday. William Tillman goes as delegate.

George Brown won't sail for old England till after the lawns and flower beds of his customers are all fixed up. Perhaps he will come over every spring to do the work for them.

It has been demonstrated between the two schools, high and public, that $1.25 will purchase more real labor and intellect than $1.80. Moral—Don't pay too high for the whistle.

Dan Sheahen went to Grass lake, Thursday, hunting for ducks. He evidently found them, for when he returned he had enough for a month, and in his prosperity did not fail to remember us.

Burglars entered James Anderson's store in Lake Forest the other night, broke open his safe and got $15. Pretty small haul for a burglary, but Mr. Anderson has too much sense to keep much money there.

The high-toned sportsmen of this region meet tomorrow, Saturday, evening in Sheridan hall parlors, in Rogers Park, to form a shooting club, etc. None but the "high mucky-mucks" can join this affair.

Judge Donnelly has set Monday, April 7, as the day for opening the special term of court to try the cases against Everett's poolroom people. It seems to be his desire to back up the people in their fight against this resort.

Mrs. Mary R. Hammond is pushing one of her cottages toward completion as fast as possible for the new minister, who wants to live up in town where the swash and swirl of active life is felt. If he expects to get in on April 1 he will be sadly "fooled," that's sure.

As an illustration of the twentieth century method let us say that Druggist Schumacher ordered a package of antitoxin last Saturday by teleppone after 10 o'clock a.m., to come by mail, and at 1 o'clock Mr. King, who knew the urgency of the case, laid it on his counter.

There were nine children in the Stoker household when Jessie and her brother were taken sick, but by the free use of antitoxin Dr. Bergen stamped it out so that none of the others were infected. He used some $20 worth in about ten days, and probably saved several lives.

Don't drink all the microbes that are churned up in the water of Lake Michigan at this time of the year. The board of health of Chicago has notified the citizens to boil the water twenty minutes. Not necessary to do that here. It is cheaper to buy sparkling spring water and save ice and doctor bills. William Tillman. Telephone 494.

Sparkling spring water is delivered from the spring about one mile west of Highland Park direct to your home. No expensive transportation charges, and as good a mineral water as the high-priced article drawn from Lake Michigan, filtered and shipped at large expense to the Park from Chicago and other points. Call up William Tillman and get a special rate for supplying your home all summer. Telephone 494.

In the good old days of slow trains and annual passes for the elect, the express trains all stopped here, we all knew Barney Cavanaugh, the florid-faced and crimson haired conductor of the 9:30 a. m. north bound express. Well, the company officials banqueted and honored Barney at the Union League Club for his honorable service of forty years as conductor. He never "whacked up" with the passengers. His record is as clean as the driven snow.

Our friend W. O. Hipwell has erected a fine brass cross, highly burnished, on the altar in Trinity church in honor of his first wife. It is Celtic in design, copied after one which stood on the green or park in Mrs. Hipwell's native town of Killenny. Mr. Hipwell drew the plan, made the model and had it cast and finished. It stands about thirty inches high and weighs some sixty pounds. It is an elegant bit of church decoration and serves a noble purpose.

Olaf Lindblom, the cement sidewalk builder, of Second and Walnut streets, won his suit against Carleton Moseley, of Prospect avenue, in the circuit court at Waukegan yesterday.

The case grew out of a sidewalk built for Moseley last summer by Mr. Lindblom, and which said Moseley refused to pay for, even after the city had accepted the walk as satisfactory. Attorney Malmin fought the case for Lindblom and had no trouble in convincing the jury that it was a just bill and should be paid.

Earl Purdy ordered fifteen bicycles a few days ago. They came and in five days fourteen of them had been sold and the people, like on both boards this time who will see to it that the money paid for taxes by the citizens of this town is spent with our home merchants so far as possible, and will insist that the board do its own purchasing of supplies and not delegate employes having no interest whatever in our town or its prosperity, except to draw a salary.

A PUBLIC MEETING

Of the citizens of Highland Park will be held at McDonald's hall, Saturday evening, March 15, at 7:45, for the purpose of discussing some important matters of general interest.

JESSIE ELIZABETH STOKER

She and brother had the diphtheria and passed through that safely, but she was too low and exhausted to rally, and died Sunday evening of heart failure. She was born in Milwaukee, Wis., December 31, 1892, and so was a little over 9 years old

The attending physician did all that could be done, but she could not rally. Just after noon Monday the casket was borne from the house and at 2 p. m. the friends gathered at Elm place and took the electric cars to the county line cemetery, where Rector Wolcott read the burial service, friends strewed flowers on the box, the grave was filled, and then literally covered with blossoms.

The saddest feature of the service was the absence of all the members of little Jessie's family. But, of course, they could not go, being under strict quarantine, and the father, ignorant of his child's death, was in St. Luke's hospital. There are six children left.

Immediately after the removal of the casket the board of health had the house thoroughly fumigated and has since raised the quarantine.

Mr. Stoker came home from the hospital Wednesday, as soon as he heard of the fatal issue of little Jessie's illness.

The family are all very grateful for the thoughtful kindness of their neighbors and the people generally.
