Dr. Pomeroy entertained Mrs. Townsend, of Seattle, Wash., Mrs. Flanner, of Springfield, Mo., Mrs. Benedict and Miss Benedict, of Chicago, at luncheon at the Moraine Saturday last.

Among the late arrivals at the Moraine are Robert E. Ross, of Chicago; Major and Mrs. Thomas L. Casey and Miss C. F. Pope, of St. Louis; Mrs. John N. Patterson and Mrs. I. S. McFarline, of Pittsburgh.

Preparations are being made for a grand cotillion at the Moraine, to take place sometime this month, but the date has not been positively fixed. It is purposed to make the affair the most brilliant social event of the season on the North Shore, and of which a full announcement will be made in the next issue.

F. W. Cushing Thursday brought out a party of twelve friends from Chicago on the "Old Times" coach and entertained them at a congenial dinner at the Moraine. Mr. Cushing's guests were as follows: Mrs. James Walsh, Miss Adelaide Walsh, Mrs. J. Souldard La Motte, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Lyman, Jr., Mrs. Frank H. Hamilton, Miss Richardson, Messrs. George W. Cornwall, Charles E. Brown, Vincent J. Walsh and L. K. Cushing.

The Moraine is becoming increasingly popular with the automobilists and a greater number stopped at the hotel on Sunday than ever before in one day. They are attracted to the North Shore by the beautiful Sheridan Road, but many on Sunday arrived in bad humor, having had to run the gauntlet of the police forces in the several towns south of us. One party complained they had been arrested twice on their way out from Chicago, and in neither case would they admit they were exceeding the speed limit.

THE MOODY FRESH AIR HOME.

Quite a singular coincidence occurred at the Fresh Air Home last week that proves beyond a doubt there is a Providence who will provide, and which at the Home they claim was a direct answer to prayer. Seeing the supply of staples rapidly nearing depletion, with little prospect of replenishment, the faithful ones in charge, who give themselves and their time to this beautiful work for the little children, asked God in prayer to provide for their needs, and he did in a way as miraculous as seven loaves and two fishes. Mr. Gaylord, who is the superintendent of the Sunday school, and the moving spirit of this magnificent work carried on in Ravinia, as well as the other home at Evergreen Park, on the Grand Trunk line, where the needy old people are taken out in relays of ten each week—Mr. Gaylord, to go back, was in Chicago last Saturday, just preparing to make the 2 o'clock train, when he was called to the telephone by a well-known wholesale grocer, who said he had just shipped a quantity of sugar, coffee, beans and bacon to the Home at Ravinia. He added he was much interested in this splendid scheme for giving the children of the poor a little country outing, and that he would like to add his little mite, which proved a most generous and opportune "mite."

Arriving at Ravinia the first person Mr. Gaylord encountered was the cook, who handed him a memorandum of things he absolutely must have before Sunday, and strange to relate the list contained the very identical four articles that the Chicago merchant had that day shipped to them without ever realizing the lack and need of them.

Another recent happening is well worth the publishing, it is most touching and comes to us all—big folks and little folks alike.

GRAND CROSSING, Aug. 4, 1902.

DEAR MR. GAYLORD:

We used to belong to the Birdies of your Sunday school, but now we go to the Brookline Presbyterian Sunday school. When we lived on the north side we had no green yard to play in like we now have. We also have plenty of sand to make pies with. We are sorry for so many children who have not what we have, and we wish to give these $4 to send two of the children to the country, where they can have so much fun in the green grass and flowers. Sister Frances and myself have saved most of this since last Christmas by getting five cents a week from papa and mamma for being extra good sometimes, and for washing the supper dishes. I must now close my letter. Good bye,

MABEL LINDBLOM.

Each Saturday the parents and friends of the children are brought out to spend the day together with them.

Last Saturday little Herbert Edison, 5 years old, distinguished himself in the bun-eating contest, in which he proved the champion. He was also able to recite eight verses of scripture with the references.

During the season the average weekly attendance at the Home has been forty-five. This week there are forty boys and girls out. There are two little crippled children in the number this week, and it is a pleasant sight to see them tripping along bright and merry.

One little girl of 11, who comes from oh, such a miserable, pitiful home, her father a drunkard, and a mother who scarcely merits the name, for years has not known what it is to go three consecutive days without headache and sickness, has been spending three weeks at the Home. She does not know what a headache is now, and romps and plays and comes in with a good hearty appetite, when at first she could not be coaxed to eat, she now passes her plate for the third and fourth helping.

There has been such a perceptible increase in the mail from Ravinia of late as to cause inquiry from the postal authorities. It is easily accounted for. On leaving the city the children are instructed to write to their parents, with the result that the mail budget from the Home is often of large proportions.

The principle carried out for so many years by Dwight L. Moody of reaching all phases of life, from the cradle to the grave, still prevails, and is being carried out by the Moody workers. It is the plan and desire to be able by next year to purchase a tract of land in some attractive country place and erect three homes—one for the children, another which will enable the young men and women of moderate circumstances to spend a vacation in the country at a small cost, and a third for destitute old people.

The home will continue into the middle of September. Have you called on these happy little folks yet? It is a pleasant experience.
