FEW MEN DYE THEIR HAIR.
 Unless It Is Gray and They Are Looking for Employment, Says a Communicative Barber.

Hair dye among men has almost passed out of use, says the New York Sun. One barber, who has for years been employed in the best of the city barber shops, told a Sun reporter the other day that he had not been called upon to dye the hair or beard of a customer for 20 years.

"I remember," he said, "that the last time I had to do it was toward the end of the winter of 1882. Since that time there have been so few applications to have anything of the kind done that we do not now even make any preparations for the jobs, and I don't believe that there is a bottle of any kind of hair dye in the place.

"I can remember, however, when the situation was very different. In the old days men dyed their mustaches and even their hair on the slightest provocation. Red-headed men used to dye their hair as a matter of course, and as soon as the gray hairs began to appear the customary resort was to the dye. But that is all changed now.

"There are, of course, many men who still dye their hair and beards, but they are not the kind that patronize the expensive barber shops. I think it would be found that most of them did it for business purposes.

"As it is hard for them to get certain kinds of work when they are gray haired, they are compelled to resort to dye. But men have, as a rule, quite given up the use of it."

DEMAND FOR POSTAL CARDS.
 The Government Printer Turns Out 3,000,000 a Day and That Is Not Enough.

One of the most noticeable developments in the post office department is the increasing use of postal cards. The number circulated through the mails is increasing every month and to supply the demand the United States postal printing office up in Rumford Falls, Me., is being run night and day, reports the New York Sun.

It is now turning out 3,000,000 postal cards daily and still the demand increases. New York, Chicago, Boston, Pittsburg, Detroit, Cincinnati, Baltimore and Troy use more postal cards than other cities.

One of the newest and increasing uses for postal cards is to secure opinions on all sorts of subjects. Whenever a business concern, a social organization or a political body wishes to test the state of feeling on any point now it circulates postal cards.

They are printed so that all the citizen whose opinion is sought needs to do, is to write "yes" or "no" or to affix a mark to a question, sign his name and drop the card in the mail box.

It is a simple and effective means of feeling the public pulse and it is helping Uncle Sam's trade in postal cards wonderfully.

A HYPHENATED MESSAGE.

Amusing Experience of an American Who Went to Reside in Mexico.

"When you take up a residence in the City of Mexico," said an American, who had lived there for several years, "you are waited upon by the police, who ask you how many beggars may call at your house every morning and receive a dole.

"Your answer is recorded, and only the number of beggars mentioned dare show up.

"I had my brother with me at the house, and our answers to the police differed somewhat. Two weeks after their call a messenger came on an errand and inquired for Jones.

"Which Jones?" I asked.

"Senor," he replied. "I know that there are two of you—the Jones-you-can-send-along-about-eight-of-'em and the Jones-I-won't-feed-a-cussed-one-of-'em, and the Jones I want is not the first."

"Then, as I'm the one who said eight beggars might come around, you don't want me."

"It cannot be. It is the I-won't-feed-a-cussed-one-of-'em-Jones I want."

"But he is not in just now. Can you leave your message with me?"

"Si, senor. Tell you him when he arrives that if he don't-want-to-feed-a-cussed-one-of-'em he-can-go-to-blazes-and-be-hanged-to-him."

Mrs. Baldwin and Mrs. Thompson, who have been the guests of Mrs. H. P. Davidson for the past month, have returned to their homes in New Haven, Conn.

Latest reports from Mr. Bohl is that he is having good weather and a good visit with old friends and expects to come home refreshed and ready for work.

To see that safe roll into Mrs. Bohl's store yesterday speaks louder than words—a continual improvement and increase of stock must mean increase of trade.

The cotillion given in honor of the young people by Mr. Kirk at the Highland Park Club this evening and the Moraine harvest dance tomorrow night will bring the week to a brilliant social finale.

The county fair has developed a taste for rustic doings, and the old-fashioned harvest dinner to be given at the Moraine Saturday evening promises to be the decidedly popular feature of the week among society people.

H. Chandler Egan, by his incomparable playing in the 36-hole qualifying round for the western amateur championship at Wheaton Wednesday, succeeded in making another record for himself by lowering the amateur record to 163 and capturing the gold medal offered for the lowest score. Mr. Egan has certainly valiantly sustained the honor of the Exmoor club this season.

The mission which is being very successfully carried on by the Carmelite Fathers at St. Mary's church this week, will come to a close Sunday with the papal benediction, and the benediction of the blessed sacrament. Everybody is most cordially welcome at all the various exercises, regardless of denomination or creed, but it is especially urged upon all Catholics the importance of appreciating the privileges of this mission.

We can scarcely say enough in praise of the three delightful, original and attractive new books for the little people by Mrs. Laura D. Fessenden, which the publishers for the first time are presenting to the public this week. The titles of these fairly captivating little volumes are: "The Moon Children," "2002: Child Life 100 Years from Now" and "Robin Hood." The books, written in Mrs. Fessenden's habitually happy style, are generously and admirably illustrated by that wonderfully clever artist, Mr. Campbell, and, while written ostensibly for the "wee folk," we dare say the children of "a larger growth" will read them with almost equal delight and amusement, and eagerly follow to the end the weird, exciting adventures of little Patsy and "The Moon Children." Highland Park may well be proud, for eminent distinction is hers—whether in the realm of golf and athletics, philanthropy, science, music, art or literature.
