Army red tape has ensnared Cupid at Fort Sheridan so that it is almost impossible for an enlisted man to marry. The private soldiers have drawn up a written complaint to their commander. The private who wishes to marry must first make a written application to the captain. This is handed to the commander of the Fort. If worthy of consideration it is forwarded to Washington and placed on file at the adjutant general's office. In several instances the delay has caused applicants to change their minds. The officers declare the desire to marry is due to the "commutation rations" granted

MORE PRISONERS ESCAPE.
It is reported that two long term prisoners and their sentry made a daring escape recently from Fort Sheridan, walking out of the south gate of the reservation, boarding a car for Highwood and leaving on a Chicago & Northwestern train for Chicago.

The men alledged to have escaped were John Gosh, sentry, member of Company A, Third Infantry; Wm. Hopkins, who was serving a two years' sentence and Will Leonard, who was serving a three and one half years' sentence. They had been put to work to clear snow in front of the quartermaster's quarters and Gosh had been especially detailed to watch Hopkins and Leonard. At 10:30 Gosh requested to move his prisoners to a point further south and on being ordered to do so coolly marched them out of the reservation in time to catch a passing car.

The day previous two young ladies had called at the post to see Gosh and Hopkins and after a long talk with them had left.

Arriving at Highwood the men were seen to meet two women answering the description of those seen at the post and together they entered a lodging house. The sentry and prisoners changed their uniforms for citizen's clothes. Leaving on a train that is due at Highwood shortly after the men disappeared were seen two women and three men, one of whom carried a rifle.
