

A MODERN INSTITUTION

The new Highland Park State Bank, which opened its doors to the public February 23, incorporated with a capital of $30,000, has a force of officers at its head which alone speaks well for the success and reliability of the institution. It is a great benefit to a city to have a state bank which is as thoroughly equipped as this one, being fire and burglar proof and supplied with safety deposit boxes for the protection of valuable articles and documents.

It is noticeable that this bank keeps its doors open during the noon hour. This is certainly a move in the right direction. From 8 a. m. to 3 p. m. are the proper business hours for a bank. An institution doing the amount of business done by this bank would necessarily be obliged to close at that hour in the afternoon in order to get the day's business adjusted before six o'clock. As it is, it has been found necessary to add considerably to the working force.

The lizard-like pterodactyl, which had membranous wings, with a spread of 20 feet, is the pattern for the airship which Prof. Langley, of the Smithsonian Institution, has built and recently tested unsatisfactorily.

Being the "son of one's father" may be a hindrance or a help. It is first necessary for the son of a father to "make good," says the Albany (N. Y.) Argus. Having shown cause—having lived down the handicap and proved the non-existence of silly conceit or stupidity—thereafter the son of his father has much easier sledding than a young man of equal abilities but of obscure parentage. His father's friends will help him; the family name, influence, prestige and traditions will all help him, so that while "not merely the son of his father," he will show, if he has sense, that his road is a great deal easier, straighter and smoother because his father broke the path for him to travel.

German publishers have definitely decided not to exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exhibition at St. Louis. The trade fears wholesale piracy of German literary works by American competitors as a result of the alleged looseness of the United States copyright law. Germany produces 25,000 new books a year, against a little more than 5,000 in the United States.
