Incident of Recent Occurrence Illustrating French Army Discipline -A Grenadier's Offense.

FRANKLY OWNED HIS FAULT:

Although there has been complaint of late about a growing lack of discipline in the ranks of the French army, the demoralization has not, it is bulieved, progressed seriously, as the following incidents, coming from French naval port, will illustrate:

A general holding a high command made his appearance a few days ago at the barracks of an infantry regiment, which, in obedience to his orders, was promptly drawn up in the yard. Then he explained the reason in a brief address. He said that as he was walking in the town attired in mufti on the previous day a man belonging to the corps, who was the worse for liquor, accosted-him rudely and asked him to stand him a drink. "Let him step out of the ranks," he toncluded.

Immediately a bugler emerged, and, saluting, said: "It is I, mon general." The incident is characteristic and apropos of it one is reminded of such an adventure which befell a certain French marshal. A grenadier, who was exasperated at some injustice that had been done him, pointed his pistol at him and pulled the trigger, but it did not go off. Without moving a muscle, the veteran cried: "Four days in the cells for keeping your arms in a bad state." The bugler's bonesty can scarcely have failed to be an extenuation of his offense in the eyes of the general.

Commercial Camphor.

Practically all the camphor of commerce comes from Japan and Formosa, which is a Japanese colony. As Japan needs it for making smokeless gunpowder, the government has forbidden its ILLINOIS export, so that Russia may not get any, and also in order that the Japanese powder mills may not run short. Japan's control of the camphor trade gives the mikado a sort of control over war among other nations.
