Judge Hibbard tried a man for riding out after dark without a lighted lamp on his buggy in a rather peculiar manner this week. The judge was at one end of town and the defendani at the other end. The judge telephoned the charges to the man and he in turn pleaded guilty over the wires. He had no defense and asked the amount of the fine, which was $1 50, and paid it to City Clerk Finney as directed by the judge. Now let sleepy Waukegan wake up and get into the judicial swim and keep up with the rush of events in this twentieth century.
