A Merciful Release

Mr. Bronson had recently moved into the neighborhood, and when a polite man called upon him with the information that the town band would play a selection of carols before certain houses, he willingly promised a donation.

When it came to turn up, he was astounded when, on Boxing day, his visitor called again "for that little donation."

"But," protested the gentleman, "your band did not play in front of my house."

It was the visitor's turn to be surprised.

"My dear sir," he gasped "if our band had—er—troubled you, do you think I should have had the impudence to call on you? * Your name was on the list, consequently you—er—escaped! Perhaps, sir, being somewhat of a stranger, you don't know our band? Ah!"
