A Foraging Expedition

Supplies ran short at the Northwestern Military Academy this week, and there was but scant prospect of receiving shipments from Chicago on account of the strike. Yesterday one of the naval launches was put in commission, and Major Davidson with a party of cadets, embarked on a foraging expedition, having a Colt's automatic gun mounted in the bow. The launch and party reached Chicago yesterday morning, took on board a supply of provisions, and returned, without firing a shot, to the relief of the starving cadets. Unfortunately very few of us have at our command, naval launches, rapid fire guns, or forces of men that we might rely upon at this time.
