

GLENCOE NOTES

Miss Helen Martin, who has been very ill for three weeks, is slightly improving.

Grandpa Clyde has returned from Elgin, Illinois, where he has been for some time past.

Miss Elizabeth Ruther is home after an extended visit of four months with relatives in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ruggles and family of Chicago are new residents of the village, having taken the Orde house for the winter.

Mr. Thomas H. Murdow has moved into his new store house but lately completed on Central avenue. The store house adjoins his family residence.

Mr. B. D. Nicholls is building at the corner of Sheridan Road and Central avenue, and adds another to the several fine houses that are building on and near Sheridan road.

A water famine came unexpectedly upon the village late Monday afternoon and caused much surprise and annoyance to more than one family who wished six o'clock dinner.

The Missionary Club held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Martin this week. Mrs. W. H. Johnson read a paper, the subject being "The Annual Missionary Meeting" held at Oak Park.

A contract for the wiring of the African church building has been concluded, and work on that line will soon be started. The North Shore Electric Light Company are the contractors.

Mrs. Kneebone has returned from the east and is now living at Mrs. Brewster's where they will make their home. Mrs. Kneebone was a teacher in the grammar school before her recent marriage.

Miss Shays of Chicago is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Lane this week. Miss Shays has but lately become a teacher in the grammar school of Highland, her first term there begun in September.

Plans for a parsonage are being considered by the colored settlement. They feel that their goodly number should afford such a necessity and their energies are bent towards the raising of sufficient funds.

Mrs. Bartholf entertained thirty ladies Friday afternoon. Mrs. Paul Brown's interesting account of her European trip was one of the features of the afternoon's entertainment. At five o'clock a dainty tea was served.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Orde left their summer home in the village, this week. They have been postponing the opening of their town house on Michigan avenue, wishing to enjoy the usual brilliant autumn of the north shore.

The Woman's Library Club met at the home of Mrs. August Zeising, Thursday afternoon. Papers on Japanese women were read by Miss Bitts and Miss Bennet. The subject was ably handled and afforded an interesting topic for discussion.

The village seems to be threatened with no more cases of diphtheria. The damp weather has rendered the prevalence of such diseases probable and it was thought by some more cases might follow the single one on record, which has been prevented, however.

Mr. George H. Beall of Glencoe very narrowly escaped serious injuries when alighting from a Northwestern train in Winnetka, Saturday evening. The brakeman was apparently a little over anxious to start and Mr. Beall was thrown violently to the pavement. He was considerably shaken up as a result of the fall but no bones were broken. A French clock, which he was carrying, did not fare quite so well.

The two rather disastrous fires which have occurred lately in the village have led to placing of a new water hydrant on the west side of Sheridan road and near Central avenue. This will be some thing of a protection in case of fire to the residents in this vicinity, who up to the present time, have had no fire plug within reach for an emergency.

Fred Lane has gone back to his ancient love and has been trapping in the Skokie. His cabin is already lined well with musk-rat furs and it is reported there is the utmost consternation among the four-footed and web-footed inhabitants of the Skokie, whose traditions go back to a time when Fred was the terror of that vicinity.

Glencoe's state of unrest has not yet abated and will not, in all probability, until she is as much improved as possible. Park avenue is the present scene of operation and is much cut up, in consequence of the new sewer system, the trenches for which having been made the early part of the week. In digging these the large sewer digger came in contact with the water main on Park avenue, damaging the pipe to such an extent that experts from Chicago were sent for before repairs could be made. As it was, some hours were consumed before the breakage was entirely repaired and water flowed once more from the various hydrants.

Senator Crane tells this one: Farmer Dockridge was hastily awakened in the dead hour of the night by Alf, the hired man, who told him the barn was on fire. Instructing Alf to blindfold the horses and lead them out, he hurriedly donned his trousers and rushed into the summer kitchen, grabbed a screw driver and ran out to the barn.

The roof was burning fiercely, but he dashed into the barn and began with frantic haste to unscrew the hinges of the door. Alf had succeeded in getting the horses out safely, but the farmer stuck to his job and finally emerged with the doors just as the roof fell in.

"That is a good deal of risk to take for a bit of firewood," said a neighbor, who had come over to see what he could do.

"Firewood," said the farmer, pointing to pencil marks on the door; "see them figures? Well, them's my business accounts for six years, and worth more than the hull darn barn."—Boston Herald.

Prof. Nichols, the Cornell physicist, during the recitation of a freshman class in natural philosophy, observed a tall, lanky youth in a rear seat, his head in a recumbent position, his body in a languid pose, his eyes half closed and his legs extended far out in an adjacent aisle. He was either asleep or about to lose consciousness. "Mr. Frazer," said the great scientist, "you may recite." The freshman opened his eyes slowly. He did not change his summolent pose. "Mr. Frazer, what is work?" "Everything is work" was the drawling reply. "What? Everything is work?" "Yes sir." "Then, I take, you would like me and the class to believe that this desk is work?" "Yes, sir," replied the youth, wearily, "that desk is woodwork."

From a Georgia Scrap Book

I find nothing in the old war scrapbook more sadly interesting than the following two letters, the last of many between Lee and Grant.

"April 7.—Lieutenant General Grant, Commanding United States Army.—General: I have received your note of this date. Though not entirely of the opinion you express relative to the hopelessness of further resistance on the part of the army of Northern Virginia, I reciprocate your desire to avert the useless effusion of blood, and therefore; before considering your proposition, I ask the terms you will offer on condition of its surrender?
R. E. LEE, General.

"Appomattox Church, April 9.—In accordance with my letter to you of the 8th, I propose the following terms, to-wit: Rolls of all officers and men to be made in duplicate, one copy to be retained by an officer designated by me, and the other to be retained by such officers as you may designate; the officers to give their individual paroles not to take up arms against the government of the United States until properly exchanged; and each company or regiment commander to sign a parole for the men of their commands; the arms, artillery and public property to be stacked or packed and turned over to an officer designated by me to secure them. This will not embrace the side arms of officers, or private horses or baggage. This done, each officer and man will be allowed to return to their homes, not to be disturbed by the United States authorities so long as they observe their parole and the laws in force where they may reside.

Very respectfully,

U. S. GRANT.
"Lieutenant General."
