Death of Mr. Duggan

Michael J. Duggan, one of Highland Park's oldest residents, died of pneumonia Tuesday evening at 10:30, at his home on First Street. Mr. Duggan was born June 24th, 1844, in Achille, County Mayo, Ireland, and came to this country at the age of ten years. He first lived in Waukegan, where he married Miss Sibia Kilbane nearly forty years ago. Shortly after their marriage they came to Highland Park. When the civil war broke out he enlisted with a Lake county Regiment and served throughout the four years.

Mr. Duggan was the oldest employee of this division of the Chicago Northwestern, having been with the road nearly fifty years. About two years ago the officials offered to retire him on a pension in recognition of his faithful services but he refused and in spite of poor health continued at his work until New Year's day when he was taken with his last illness. Although two operations were performed both proved unsuccessful.

Beside the widow, he is survived by his brother who lives in Waukegan a brother James and six children, Mrs. Joyce, Mrs. Loesch, Mrs. Kinkade, and John, Agnes and Michael, all of this city, to mourn his death.

The funeral services were held on Friday morning at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's church, and the burial was in Waukegan.

Euthanasia

A measure, dubbed the "Osterization Bill," has been introduced in the General Assembly of Ohio. A motion to table the bill was refused by a large majority.

If the proposed measure becomes a law it gives physicians a legal right to put to death by means of anesthetics persons suffering from what they (the physicians) may deem "incurable" disease, or, in cases of injury, where intense pain is being suffered and the request comes from the person.

The measure, which in plain words mean legalizing murder, is disguised by the gentle term euthanasia. In plainer terms, upon the recommendation of three physicians, presented to the proper court, the judge may authorize the killing of the patient in a gentle way.

It seems strange that any considerable number of men could anywhere be found who for a moment seriously believe that it is possible for any physician to tell who is incurable, judged only from their own tenets of faith.

Medical science, so called, has become almost a laughing stock in the common market-place. Who, when it is pressed home personally, accepts the dictum of a doctor as the hopelessness of his own recovery from illness?

Leaving this phase of the measure presented in the Ohio Assembly, the opportunities for crime and temptations presented, should this bill become a law, would be something fearful.

The temptation to murder sickly, helpless children and old people who are a burden, and where money, even of small value, is concerned, by the alternate heirs, would prove tremendous and open the door of untold horrors of crimes committed with the connivance of unscrupulous physicians and nurses.

Dr. Walter Kempster, of Milwaukee, has bodily stated that he believes in the proposed law, and admits that he once killed a suffering woman by administering opiates. No one questions that this statement is true, with probably other victims added, but that this physician should thus publicly make the admission of murder committed shows the trend of the times. Many Chicago physicians have likewise indorsed the proposed measure.

A Case of Second Sight

A Scotch minister and his friend, who were coming home from a wedding, began to consider the state in which their potatoes at the wedding feast had left them.

"Sandy," said the minister, "just stop a minute here till I go ahead. Maybe I don't walk very steady, and the good wife might remark something not just right."

He walked ahead of the servant for a short distance and then asked:

"How is it? Am I walking straight?"
"Oh, ay," answered Sandy thickly; "ye're a'recht—but who's that walking with you?"—
