A Monster Junk Heap

"When the cleaning of San Francisco begins," says The Engineering and Mining Journal, "that city will doubtless be the largest junk-market that this country has known. We have some huge estimates of the quantity of scrap iron, old copper, and other metals that may be recovered from the ruins. These estimates are largely of the character of speculations, which lend occasional excitement to the otherwise unromantic business of the junk-dealer. However, the quantity of old metals that will be obtained from San Francisco is undoubtedly very large. It is to be expected that at least an equivalent quantity, and we hope a much larger quantity, will eventually be returned to the city in the form of manufactured articles. Incidentally, the small metal-refining concerns, which buy their crude material from the junkmen, will doubtless have many interesting metallurgical problems such as the separation of mixtures of lead, tin, and spelter, melted together in the conflagration. These refiners often have such problems, and devise ingenious solutions, accounts of which would be interesting to the metallurgists who are familiar only with the preparation of the metal from virgin material.

From Poor Richard's Almanac.

A house without woman and firelight is like a body without soul or spirit.

A rich rogue is like a fat hog.

Who never does good till as dead as a log.

Fools make feasts and wise men eat them.

Distrust and caution are the parents of security.

Beware of meat twice boiled, and an old foe reconciled.

Nothing more like a fool than a drunken man.

Would you live with ease, do what you ought, and not what you please.

No man e'er was glorious who was not laborious.

There has been as great souls unknown to fame as any of the most famous.

He that cannot obey cannot command.

Strange that he who lives by shifts can seldom shift himself.

He does not possess wealth, it possesses him.

A learned blockhead is a greater blockhead than an ignorant one.

A little house well filled, a little field well tilled, and a little wife well willed are great riches.

The fame of fools is ancient.

If pride leads the van beggary brings up the rear.
