Subscribed and sworn to before me this 23d day of May, 1907.
WILLIAM M. DOOLEY, Notary Public.

Bright and Breezy

That was a very pointed and possibly a very wholesome bit of sarcasm when a gentleman turned on a coxcomb, who had been making himself offensive, and said, Sir, you ought to be the happiest man in the world. You are in love with yourself, and you have no rival.

"I am pleased to learn, Mrs. Clover," said the new pastor in a rural field, "That your son is away seeking a higher education. Some one told me that he was in the city attending college. I am a college man myself. What college is he attending?"

"It's one o' them barber colleges," replied Mrs. Clover.—Detroit Free Press.

"Mother sent me," said the little girl to a neighbor, "to ask you to come and take tea with her this evening."

"Did she say at what time, my dear?"
 "No, ma'am; she only said she would ask you, and then the thing would be off her mind—that was all she said."

"A lawyer residing in the north of England, and noted for his laconic style of expression, sent the following terse and witty note to a refractory client, who would not succumb to his reiterated demands for the payment of his bill: "Sir, if you pay the inclosed, you will oblige me. If you do not, I shall oblige you."

An amusing story is told of a young widow who had this inscription engraved upon the monument of her late husband: "My grief is so great that I cannot bear it." In due time she married again, and the inscription troubled her, so she soothed her sensitive nature and disposed of the source of her trouble by adding to the inscription the word, "alone."

Not long ago, when the venerable Edward Everett Hale was on a visit to New York, he boarded a crowded Broadway car for a trip uptown. A lad in a corner rose and politely offered the old man his seat. Dr. Hale took it, saying in his hearty way as he did so: "Thank you, my boy, thank you. I'll do as much for you when you are eighty if I happen to be around then."

In one of the Philadelphia colleges a professor of chemistry asked a student the other day: "Now, suppose you were called to a patient who had swallowed a heavy dose of oxalic acid, what would you administer?" "I would administer the sacrament," replied the student, who is studying for the ministry and takes chemistry only because it is obligatory.
