A park commission should be created by North Shore people, under the laws of 1895, to improve the opportunity offered by the Sanitary canal for beautifying the country. It is claimed that ninety-nine per cent of the benefits derived from the canal will be given to the people. These take shape in better drainage, a consequent improvement in health conditions, park possibilities, enhanced values of real estate and plenty of water, without considering employment of a large number of people in construction work.

NORTH SHORE NOTES

W. J. Bryan lectured on "The Prince of Peace" at the First Methodist Church of Evanston Tuesday night to a large audience. The address was primarily for young men, because young men are likely to think it smart to be skeptical. His choice of subject he explained as due to the fact that he gave church talks before he gave political, and expected to make them after he had quit giving political talks, further that religion was a theme which appealed to men all the time while politics appealed to men a small part of the time.

Various comments were heard as: "A good sermon," "All been said before," "I was disappointed," "Bryan decks the old truths in new garments," "Coming from Bryan it will help the boys."

Mr. Bryan was the guest of the University Club after the lecture.

A few quotations from the lecture follow:

"The human measure of a human life is the income." "The divine measure is the outgo, the overflow, the contribution."

"Our religion is successfully combating the heathen faiths."

"How prudently most men sink unknown into the grave; how thoughtlessly a few rise to immortality."

"Mystery about religion does not destroy its usefulness. More mystery in everyday life than in the Bible."

"Vicarious atonement is the most natural in the world." "Most difficult for a man to be humble. He is proud of his riches, learning or ancestry. If he once becomes humble, he is in danger of becoming proud of his humility."
