SHE SAVED THE BANK WITH $26.

During the recent strain occasioned in many banks all over the country there were many incidents of sincere and earnest desire to assist in promoting confidence and helping over financial difficulties. Here is one which herole devotion to duty and honor.

It was during the run on the Knickerbocker Trust Company, and the story is told by one of the paying tellers, who stood at one of the little windows and paid out millions of dollars to the almost endless line of people. It was a steady stream of people and a steady stream of money was poured out to them. This woman was in the line, and she held her position nearly the entire day, moving up toward the window, foot by foot—almost inch by inch, as the people ahead of her got their money and stepped out of line. Finally she was at the window, and then came the surprise. She presented her book and the teller took it mechanically. In fact, the whole thing would have become drearily monotonous but for the seriousness of the situation. But this little woman brought a change. Examination of her book showed that she had nothing in the bank. In fact, the paying teller told her in a tone of disgust that she had overdrawn her account $26. "I guess I know that," she said. "That is just why I am here. I heard this bank was going to collapse, and I didn't want to have any of the blame of it, so I just hurried right here as quickly as possible to give you that $26. Here it is, and I hope it will help you to pull through."

D. A. Holmes, Cashier

"I wish to complain," said the Easter bride, haughtily, "about that flour you sold me. It was tough." "Tough, ma'am?" stammered the grocer. "Yes, tough. I made a pie with it, and my husband could hardly cut it."

FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

She (to her husband): "The poor children! When you get up in the morning, they have gone to school, and when you return from the tavern at night, they have gone to bed. At least write them a souvenir post-card!"

A Sunday-school teacher had been telling her class the story of the Good Samaritan. When she asked them what the story meant, a little boy said, "It means that when I am in trouble my neighbors must help me."

A minister accepted a call to a church, many of whose members bred and raced horses. A few weeks later he was asked to invite the prayers of the congregation for Lucy Grey. Willingly he did so for three Sundays. On the fourth, one of the deacons told him that he need not any more. "Why," asked the good man, with an steeple-chase!"

Her (sighing): "Oh, I met such a lovely, polite man to-day." Him: "Where was that?" Her: "On the street. I must have been carrying my umbrella carelessly, for he bumped his eye into it. And I said, 'Pardon me,' and he said, 'Don't mention it—I have another eye left.'"—Cleveland Leader.

A well known minister was called to the telephone by a representative of a local paper, who inquired the subject of the next Sunday morning's discourse. "Wise as Serpents, Harmless as Doves," responded the clergyman. When the paper came out, the minister was electrified to read that "Mr. Blank will preach on the subject, 'Why is a Serpent as Harmless as a Dove?'"—The Congregationalist.

"What is the worst thing about riches?" asked the Sunday-school superintendent. And the new boy said: "Their scarcity."

Mamma: "Now, Bobby say your prayers."

Bobby (after the usual "Now I lay me"): "And please, God, make me a good boy, and if at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

"Could you forgive a boy who'd strike you?" inquired a benevolent old gentleman of a boisterous and combative little five-year-old boy. He replied: "Yeth, sir, if he were bigger than I be."

"Don't you find that it hurts your lawn to let your children play on it?" asked a friend of a suburban the other day.

"Yes," answered the gentleman addressed, "but it doesn't hurt the children."

One parrot had learned to pray and together in order that they might come to a common standard on the prayer question. But before three weeks were over both parrots were swearing, and neither of them praying.

"Do you want to kill the child?" exclaimed a gentleman as he saw a boy tip the baby out of its carriage on the walk.

"No, not quite," replied the boy; "but if I can get him to bawl loud enough, mother will take care of him while I go and wade in the ditch with Jonny Braces!"
