

GLEANINGS — WISE AND OTHERWISE.

An old gentleman, evidently a stranger to London, stopped a serious-faced youth in the street. "Young man," he said, "I want to go to Hyde Park." The youth seemed lost in thought for a moment. "Well," he finally replied, "you may just this once. But you must never ask me again."

A country yokel was walking along a busy London thoroughfare, filling his pipe with tobacco. He had just replaced his pouch in his pocket, when a boy ran up to him and said — "Matches, sir." The yokel coolly took a match, lit his pipe, and passed on, remarking, "What a wonderful place London is!" — Daylight.

An Irish recruit, was once brought up before his commanding officer for breaking into barracks—that is, getting over the wall instead of entering by the gate.

"I say, Pat," said a gentleman who was being driven to the station from a country district in Ireland, "that horse of yours is a sorry creature."

"A sorry creature, indade, yer honour," said Pat. "The fact is," he continued, "him and me has to toss up every morning to see whether he has a feed of oats or I have a drink of whisky, and, shure, the poor baste has lost five mornings running."

Jones says he thought his gas-meter had had gas-trick fever, but now he believes it to be galloping consumption.

Mamma: "What are you playing with, darling?" Darling: "With a caterpillar and two little kittenpillars, mother dear."

"Then Mr. Roxley didn't really give according to his means?" said the minister's wife. "No," replied the minister, "merely according to his meanness."

"Willie," said his mother, "are you making the baby cry?" "I'm holdin' my hand over her mouth to make her stop."

"My friend," said the philosopher, "you should try to be content with what you have." "I am," said the man who had been grumbling. "It is what I ain't got that I am dissatisfied about."

"There goes a young fellow with a very interesting history," said the assistant in the bookseller's shop. "How do you know?" "I just sold it to him."

From a Paris paper we take the following conversation in a police court: The President: "It appears from your record that you have been thirty-seven times previously convicted." The prisoner (sententiously): "Man is not perfect." — London Globe.

Uncle Toby was aghast at finding a strange darkey with his arm round Mandy's waist. "Mandy, tell that niggah to take his arm from round yo' waist," he indignantly commanded. "Tell him yo'self said Mandy haughtily. "He's a puffect stranger to me." Mark Twain once labored at the press in a far western town, where accounts were paid in wood and cabbages. On one occasion he had a bill to meet which could not be liquidated in wood and cabbages. The disconsolate humorist rushed about the town hunting for cash enough to tide him over his difficulties. In turning a corner he knocked against a citizen and overthrew him. The victim got on his feet and yelled: "You do that again and I'll knock you into the middle of next week!" "My dear fellow," said the apologetic humorist, "do it by all means. If I get over the middle of next week I see my way clear to get through the year without breaking!" — Daylight.

"It has come to my ears that you are calling me 'the governor!'" said the old man sternly. "Are you?" "I might as well admit it," said the young man, contritely. "You ought," continued the old gentleman, "you ought to have more respect for your "Absent-minded!" exclaimed the woman whose husband worries her. "He's the most absent-minded man that ever lived. He's the kind of person, who, if he were going to Klondike, would be as likely as not to leave the cook-stove behind and take along the refrigerator." — Washington Star.

Thump-rattley-bang went the piano. "What are you trying to play, Jane?" called out her father from the next room. "It's an exercise from my new instruction book, 'First Steps in Music,'" she answered. "Well, I knew you were playing with your feet," he said grimly. "Don't step so heavily on the keys: it disturbs my thoughts." — Boston Home Journal.

'Cornhill' tells the story of an English woman of high station who bewailed to a friend the loss by death of a somewhat ill-bred but extremely wealthy neighbor, who had been very liberal in his help to her country charities. "Mr. X. is dead," said she. "He was so good and kind and helpful to me in all sorts of ways. He was so vulgar, poor, dear fellow, we could not know him in England; but we shall meet in heaven."

A Yorkshire socialist, explaining to a friend the principles of socialism, remarked that all possessions should be shared equally. "If you had two horses," said the friend, "would you give me one?" "Of course," replied the socialist. "And, if you had two cows, would you do the same?" "Of course I should." "Well, supposing now," said the friend, slowly, "you had two pigs, would you give me one of them?" "Eh! tha's gettin' ower near home," said the other slyly. "Tha knows I've got two pigs."
